Mark Goudeau's - Early Childhood

Background: Goudeau was born Sept. 6, 1964, to Willie and Alberta and grew up in a Phoenix neighborhood near 12th Street and Southern Avenue. His mother was a maid, his father a lot attendant for car dealers on Camelback Road. According to court records, they divorced. An older brother said Alberta died in 1976, when Goudeau was 12, and the 13 children - seven boys and six girls - watched over each other. Goudeau was the second-youngest. He and younger brother Marvin excelled at sports. Both played football for Corona del Sol High School in Tempe. Marvin went on to play college ball, but Mark never graduated from high school because he failed to complete all the credits needed. Older brother Oscar told The Republic that their upbringing was uneventful, at times idyllic. There was no violence in the house growing up, he said, although he admitted that their father was a strict disciplinarian.

But court records for several of the Goudeau brothers and sisters tell a different story. Court records paint Goudeau as a younger child in a family plagued by drug and alcohol abuse, a family in which at least six of 13 children are felons and at least four have done prison time. One remains in prison, and another had his probation revoked last month. One quotes an older sister as saying that alcoholism ran in the family and that the children were verbally abused. And drugs have come up repeatedly in the siblings' court records, both as charges and as the reason things went wrong.

Obtained from: Klefer, Michael (2006, Sep 10). The 2 sides of Goudeau add to 'Baseline' puzzle. The Arizona Republic.
