Networks Of Domination The Social Foundations Of Peripheral Conquest In International Politics:

Networks of Domination Paul K. Macdonald, 2014 In the nineteenth century European states conquered vast stretches of territory across the periphery of the international system This book challenges the conventional wisdom that these conquests were the product of European military dominance or technological superiority In contrast it claims that favorable social conditions helped fuel peripheral conquest European states enjoyed greatest success when they were able to recruit local collaborators and exploit divisions among elites in targeted societies Different configurations of social ties connecting potential conquerors with elites in the periphery played a critical role in shaping patterns of peripheral conquest as well as the strategies conquerors employed To demonstrate this argument the book compares episodes of British colonial expansion in India South Africa and Nigeria during the nineteenth century It also examines the contemporary applicability of the theory through an examination of the United States occupation of Iraq

Networks of Domination Paul MacDonald, 2014-05-15 In the nineteenth century European states conquered vast stretches of territory across the periphery of the international system Much of Asia and Africa fell to the armies of the European great powers and by World War I those armies controlled 40 percent of the world's territory and 30 percent of its population Conventional wisdom states that these conquests were the product of European military dominance or technological superiority but the reality was far more complex In Networks of Domination Paul MacDonald argues that an ability to exploit the internal political situation within a targeted territory not mere military might was a crucial element of conquest European states enjoyed greatest success when they were able to recruit local collaborators from within the society and exploit divisions among elites Different configurations of social ties connecting potential conquerors with elites were central to both the patterns of imperial conquest and the strategies conquerors employed MacDonald compares episodes of British colonial expansion in India South Africa and Nigeria during the nineteenth century and also examines the contemporary applicability of the theory through an examination of the United States occupation of Iraq The scramble for empire fundamentally shaped and continues to shape the international system we inhabit today Featuring a powerful theory of the role of social networks in shaping the international system Networks of Domination bridges past and present to highlight the lessons of conquest

The New Power Politics Deborah Denise Avant, Oliver Westerwinter, 2016 The New Power Politics offers a fresh view of power and how it works in global politics among important contemporary security issues Power is dynamic it is something governors must continually cultivate and its use in one situation has consequences for future relationships and thus future power

Exit from Hegemony Alexander Cooley, Daniel Nexon, 2020-02-28 We live in a period of uncertainty about the fate of America s global leadership Many believe that Donald Trump s presidency marks the end of liberal international order the very system of global institutions rules and values that shaped the international system since the end of World War II Exit from Hegemony Alexander Cooley and Daniel Nexon develop a new approach to understanding the rise and decline of hegemonic orders They identify three ways in which the liberal international order is transforming The Trump administration declaring America First accelerates all three processes lessening America s position as a world power

Constructing Allied Cooperation Marina E. Henke, 2019-10-15 How do states overcome problems of collective action in the face of human atrocities terrorism and the threat of weapons of mass destruction How does international burden sharing in this context look like between the rich and the poor the big and the small These are the questions Marina E Henke addresses in her new book Constructing Allied Cooperation Through qualitative and quantitative analysis of 80 multilateral military coalitions Henke demonstrates that coalitions do not emerge naturally Rather pivotal states deliberately build them They develop operational plans and bargain suitable third parties into the coalition purposefully using their bilateral and multilateral diplomatic connections what Henke terms diplomatic embeddedness as a resource As Constructing Allied Cooperation shows these ties constitute an invaluable state capability to engage others in collective action they are tools to construct cooperation Pulling apart the strategy behind multilateral military coalition building Henke looks at the ramifications and side effects as well As she notes via these ties pivotal states have access to private information on the deployment preferences of potential coalition participants Moreover they facilitate issue linkages and side payments and allow states to overcome problems of credible commitments Finally pivotal states can use common institutional contacts IO officials as cooperation brokers and they can convert common institutional venues into fora for negotiating coalitions The theory and evidence presented by Henke force us to revisit the conventional wisdom on how cooperation in multilateral military operations comes about The author generates new insights with respect to who is most likely to join a given multilateral intervention what factors influence the strength and capacity of individual coalitions and what diplomacy and diplomatic ties are good for Moreover as the Trump administration promotes an America First policy and withdraws from international agreements and the United Kingdom completes Brexit Constructing Allied Cooperation is an important reminder that international security cannot be delinked from more mundane forms of cooperation multilateral military coalitions thrive or fail depending on the breadth and depth of existing social and diplomatic networks
