Negotiating Economic Development Laurie Kroshus Medina, 2022-07-12 The citrus industry in Belize could be said to exist primarily to satisfy the needs of people in other countries A business that is highly dependent on global markets and the geopolitics of international trade it comprises some 500 farmers many hundreds of wage laborers and two processing companies that produce frozen juice concentrate for export This new study examines how those farmers laborers and companies define and pursue shared interests and how they respond differently to the impact of national development strategies and global economic and political forces Laurie Kroshus Medina analyzes the development of the citrus industry in Belize over fifteen years to explore the relationship between the production of collective identities and the negotiation of development policies at the interface of global and local processes She shows how citrus farmers and workers processing companies and politicians compete to construct shared identities how they mobilize collective actors and how their collective action shapes the goals policies and practices associated with development Taking an ethnographic approach Medina describes how the Belizean citrus industry responds to cycles of boom and bust and the implications of such cycles for workers and growers She offers a close look at the major actors workers union members small and large growers and politicians as they respond to global changes in the citrus industry Her analysis is made more compelling through an account of two open struggles in the industry over the formation of a rival union and the attempt to buy the processing company owned by the multinational corporation Nestl She also includes a discussion of the impact of NAFTA on the industry Medina's research demonstrates how collective agency in Belize has pushed the citrus industry's development in directions that simultaneously conform to and diverge from the trajectories laid out by foreign agencies Negotiating Economic Development provides a bridge from old to new studies of Latin American social movements as it offers key insights into competing forms of identity for a wide range of social scientists concerned with the human and social aspects of development issues and globalization

Cárdenas,2018-07-09 Central Americans are the third largest and fastest growing Latino population in the United States And yet despite their demographic presence there has been little scholarship focused on this group Constituting Central American Americans is an exploration of the historical and disciplinary conditions that have structured U S Central American identity and of the ways in which this identity challenges how we frame current discussions of Latina o American ethnic and diasporic identities By focusing on the formation of Central American identity in the U S Maritza E C rdenas challenges us to think about Central America and its diaspora in relation to other U S ethno racial identities Land Grab Keri Vacanti Brondo,2013-06-06 Land Grab is a rich ethnographic account of the relationship between identity politics neoliberal development policy and rights to resource management in Garifuna communities on the north coast of Honduras before and after the 2009 coup d tat The Garifuna are a people of African and Amerindian descent who were exiled to Honduras from the British colony of St Vincent in 1797 and have long suffered from racial and cultural marginalization Employing approaches from feminist political ecology critical race studies and ethnic studies Keri Vacanti Brondo illuminates three contemporary development paradoxes in Honduras the recognition of the rights of indigenous people at the same time as Garifuna are being displaced in the name of development the privileging of foreign research tourists in projects that promote ecotourism but result in restricting Garifuna from traditional livelihoods and the contradictions in Garifuna land rights claims based on native status when mestizos are reserving rights to resources as natives themselves Brondo s book asks a larger question can freedom understood as well being be achieved under the structures of neoliberalism Grounding this question in the context of Garifuna relationships to territorial control and self determination the author explores the reregulation of Garifuna land neoliberal conservation strategies like ecotourism research tourism and voluntourism the significant issue of who controls access to property and natural resources and the rights of women who have been harshly impacted by development In her conclusion Brondo points to hopeful signs in the emergence of transnational indigenous environmental and feminist organizations Global Tourism Sarah M. Lyon,E. Christian Wells,2012-03-15 Global tourism is perhaps the largest scale movement of goods services and people in history Consequently it is a significant catalyst for economic development and sociopolitical change While tourism increasingly accounts for ever greater segments of national economies the consequences of this growth for intercultural interaction are diverse and uncertain The proliferation of tourists also challenges classic theoretical descriptions of just what an economy is What are the commodities being consumed What is the division of labor between producers and clients in creating the value of tourist exchanges How do culture power and history shape these interactions What are the prospects for sustainable tourism How is cultural heritage being shaped by tourists around the world These critical questions inspired this volume in which the contributors explore the connections among economy sustainability heritage and identity that tourism and related processes makes explicit The volume moves beyond the limits of place specific discussions case studies and best practice examples Accordingly it is organized according to three overarching themes exploring dimensions of cultural heritage the multi faceted impacts of tourism on both hosts and guests and the nature of touristic encounters Based on ethnographic and archaeological research conducted in distinct locations the contributors conclusions and theoretical arguments reach far beyond the limits of isolated case studies Together they contribute to a new synthesis for the anthropology of tourism while simultaneously demonstrating how emerging theories of the economics of tourism can lead to the rethinking of traditionally non touristic enterprises from farming to medical occupations
