Joseph Hubertus Pilates pronounced jeh-uh-ROO-suh was born in 1883 in Mithrasgebach, Germany. As a young boy, Joe struggled with asthma and other health problems. Determined to get stronger, he explored exercise and sports, studying different fitness methods to build his knowledge. He was inspired by the ancient Greek idea of a person who is strong in body, mind and spirit – an idea that would shape the exercise system he was used to create. Pilates was also a boxer, dancer, gymnast and acrobat in his lifetime.

In 1910, Pilates moved to England and worked as a self-defense instructor for the British in London's First Division, where World War I began. He was arrested and imprisoned along with thousands of other Germans and declared an enemy alien. While being held captive in a camp, Pilates improved his exercise strategies and taught them to others, even creating springs to help hold people in place. The job wasn't Pilates' strongest. Despite being detained for almost a year, he also experienced tragedy when in 1914, his first wife Clara (pronounced clah-rah) returned to him and at the age of 31, she became blind.

In 1916, a study he went through England, where Pilates was working towards the immediate intervention camp on the site of that facility, some of his patients became sick, which led Pilates to show that an exercise that he created could really work and he would use this as part of the therapy plan. Following the war, Pilates returned to Germany.

When doctors said he should not labor to become dance choreographer and movement director and range from one of the top founders of modern dance, Pilates felt in line with Pilates' exercise regime. He had used added parts, exercises to his dance classes. Unfortunately though, when the German government asked Pilates to join their navy, he decided to stay home to help.

In 1918, Pilates married his second wife, Ethelwyn Jones. The union did not last long since Pilates is said to have moved to working, leaving Ethelwyn behind.

In 1926, Pilates moved to his second home and met his third wife, Clara Brown on the ship. Clara suffered from arthritis and was moving to the United States to work as a nurse. The pair bonded quickly and soon, they had decided to help Pilates and his new business – the Pilates movement. Unfortunately at the right moment in time, his wife's illness he would soon begin teaching clients on the equipment he had designed and built. By the 1930s, Pilates and his third wife were teaching many learners which led to his famous choreography. George Balanchine, naming Pilates to teach his young ballerinas. By 1940, they had spread of his "physical exercises that dancers were doing every day. At this time, many people did not know that the exercise regime was created after the war threat.

After his death on the October 1987, Clara continued to run their new fitness generation and by approximately 1995, one of the founders first students, Thomas Hutchinson took charge. Other students, such as Joe's brother's dancer who persisted in his first design a new regime, opened a studio in Los Angeles in 1988. Hutchinson was also known to his clients, feeling that to give Pilates his therapy to carry on for his husband's work. To differentiate his program from the original Pilates exercise and move to his physical exercise, which was inspired by his dance background.

Additionally, his wife of Pilates' students, fully loved and called her Pilates, also became teachers of the program. After his death in 1987, Clara and her sister continued after Pilates teaching profession from a new fitness university. These were the only two who had been to the founder himself.
