Transforming Health Care Through Information: Case Studies Laura Einbinder,Nancy M. Lorenzi,Joan Ash,Cynthia S. Gadd,Jonathan Einbinder,2010-03-14 By any measure our field of clinical informatics is poised for rapid growth and expansion A confluence of forces and trends including pressure to contain health care costs and simultaneously expand access and coverage a desire to reduce medical error and health care disparities the need to better understand and optimize our clinical interventions and delivery systems the need to translate new knowledge into practice quickly and effectively and the need to demonstrate the value of our services all call for the application of the methods and techniques of our field some of which are well honed with experience and some of which are still in the process of being discovered Clinical informatics is not the only solution to what ails health care but it is a critical component of the solution Our methods and techniques are similar in many ways to the knowledge base of any interdisciplinary field some are informed by experience the trials and tribulations of figuring out what works through real world implementation some are informed by controlled experimentation in randomized controlled trials and related studies some are informed by critical observation and analysis and some are developed through laboratory evaluation rather than field trials As we develop both the basic science as well as the applied science of our field there is a critical role for learning from others by way of case reports and stories

Handbook of Clinical Psychology in Medical Settings Ronald H. Rozensky,Jerry J. Sweet,Steven M.

Tovian,2013-06-29 For two decades I have been responding to questions about the nature of health psychology and how it differs from medical psychology behavioral medicine and clinical psychology From the beginning I have taken the position that any application of psychological theory or practice to problems and issues of the health system is health psychology I have repeatedly used an analogy to Newell and Simon s General Problem Solver program of the late 1950s and early 1960s which had two major functional parts in addition to the executive component One was the problem solving core the procedural competence the other was the representation of the problem environment In the analogy the concepts knowledge and techniques of psychology constitute the core competence the health system in all its complexity is the problem environment A health psychologist is one whose basic competence in psychology is augmented by a working knowledge of some aspect of the health system Quite apparently there are functionally distinct aspects of health psychology to the degree that there are meaningful subdivisions in psychological competence and significantly different microenvironments within the health system I hesitate to refer to them as areas of specialization as the man who gave health psychology its formal definition Joseph Matarazzo has said that there are no specialties in psychology cited in the editors preface to this book
