Customer Care Pat Gannon-Leary, Michael McCarthy, 2010-03-15 Customer Care provides a detailed course suitable for delivery to library staff at all levels. It can be used as a stand alone reference work for customer care processes and procedures or alternatively it can be used by library staff to tailor a customer care course to suit the requirements and training needs of their own staff. Dual use reference work and or training manual. Potential as a text book. Applicable to a wider context than LIS could be used for a whole HEI institutional approach to customer care or in local authorities public services.

Development of a Training Program for Frontline Service Employees' Improvement of Student Services Debbie S. Persaud, 2005-11-04 Frontline employees represent the bloodline of an organization. This applied dissertation focused on development of a training program to improve skills necessary for quality student customer service. Six research questions were answered. First what skills are required to enhance customer service satisfaction. Second what are employees perception of attitudes and expectations relative to delivery of goods and services. Third what action is required to improve employees performance to effect customer satisfaction. Fourth what content knowledge skills and procedures are necessary for inclusion in the training plan. Fifth how can training best be structured and developed to improve the necessary skills. Sixth how and by whom should the plan be implemented and if implemented how should it be evaluated. The development problem solving methodology was used to answer the research questions. Additionally a Frontline Service Employees Perceived Training Needs Survey was administered to gather information relative to the recommended training program. The research questions were answered through procedures that involved formative and summative committees examination of the program content format design and evaluation method. The final project was a recommended frontline service employees training program. Conclusions drawn from the study revealed the following: a a training program should be implemented to enhance skills required for better student customer services within the organization. b a training program for frontline employees should include skills pertaining to active listening, trust and rapport, telephone etiquette, problem solving and conflict resolution and clear understanding and knowledge of the organization's policies and procedures. c trainees should have the choice and flexibility of mode of instruction and location of training and d an evaluation plan should be established posttraining to ensure that quality and program objectives are continuously being met. The recommended training program was submitted to the leaders of the organization who have the authority to approve its implementation.

Customer Service in Academic Libraries Stephen Mossop, 2015-10-06 The term customer service is not new to the academic library community. Academic libraries exist to serve the needs of their community and hence customer service is essential. However the term can be applied in a variety of ways from a thin veneer of politeness to an all encompassing ethic focussing organisational and individual attention on understanding and meeting the needs of the customer. For customers the library's Front Line team is the human face of the library How well they do their job can have a massive impact on the quality of the learning experience for many students and can directly impact upon their success The importance of their role and the quality of the services they offer should not be underestimated but in an increasingly digital world and with potentially several thousand individuals visiting every day whether in person or online each with their own agendas and requirements how can the library's Front Line team deliver the personal service that each of these individuals need Customer Service in Academic Libraries contributes to what academic libraries as a community do really well the sharing of best practice It brings together in one place examples of how Front Line teams from libraries across a wide geographical area Hong Kong Australia Turkey and the United Kingdom work to get it right for their customers Between them they cover a range of institutions including research intensive mixed HE FE private establishments and shared campuses All have their own tales to tell their own emphases their own ways of doing things and all bring their own examples of best practice which it is hoped readers will find useful in their own context Discusses customer service in a library setting Translates management theory into useful practice information Examines building relationships meeting customer needs and marketing and communication Provides examples of practical experience grounded in recent transferable experience
