

Speech Manager

This chapter describes the Speech Manager, the part of the Macintosh system software that provides a standardized method for Macintosh applications to generate synthesized speech.

You need to read this chapter if you want your application to be able to generate speech. For example, you may want your application to incorporate the capability to speak its dialog box messages to the user. A word-processing application might use the Speech Manager to implement a command that speaks a selected section of a document to the user. A multimedia application might use the Speech Manager to provide a narration of a QuickTime movie instead of including sampled-sound data on a movie track. Because sound samples can take up large amounts of room on disk, using text in place of sampled sound is extremely efficient.

If you are developing an application that needs only to generate speech from strings, then the information on speech contained in the chapter “Introduction to Sound on the Macintosh” in this book might be sufficient. If, however, you need to be able to manipulate the speech output or customize it to make it easier for your users to understand, you should read this chapter.

The Speech Manager is not available in all system software versions. It was introduced with the Macintosh computers with audio visual capabilities in the summer of 1993. It will continue to be incorporated into future versions of system software. You should use the `Gestalt` function to ensure that the speech services you need are available before calling them. See the discussion in the section “Checking for Speech Manager Capabilities” beginning on page 4-12 for details.

The Speech Manager and the Sound Manager adopt many of the same metaphors in the processes of sound production and speech generation. You should be aware that the Speech Manager’s approach often differs in subtle but important ways from that of the Sound Manager. Reading the chapter “Sound Manager” in this book might help you to learn to use the Speech Manager, but it is not required.

Also, while the Speech Manager uses the Sound Manager, your application should not attempt to directly access any Sound Manager data structures used by the Speech Manager. Because the Speech Manager is likely to be a rapidly evolving portion of system software, relying on Speech Manager data structures not explicitly documented in this chapter is likely to pose compatibility problems for your application.
