A Revealed Preference Ranking of U.S. Colleges and Universities Christopher Avery,Mark E. Glickman,Caroline M. Hoxby,Andrew Metrick,2006 We show how to construct a ranking of U S undergraduate programs based on students revealed preferences We construct examples of national and regional rankings using hand collected data on 3 240 high achieving students Our statistical model extends models used for ranking players in tournaments such as chess or tennis When a student makes his matriculation decision among colleges that have admitted him he chooses which college wins in head to head competition The model exploits the information contained in thousands of these wins and losses Our method produces a ranking that would be difficult for a college to manipulate In contrast it is easy to manipulate the matriculation rate and the admission rate which are the common measures of preference that receive substantial weight in highly publicized college rating systems If our ranking were used in place of these measures the pressure on colleges to practice strategic admissions would be relieved We show how to deal with tuition discounts alumni preferences early decision programs specialty schools and similar issues The Impact of U.S. News & World Report College Rankings on Admissions Outcomes and Pricing Policies at Selective Private Institutions James Monks,Ronald G.
