Present day Custer City deputy Jenna Reynolds patrols the town during the Sturgis motorcycle rally. She's on the prowl for bikers causing trouble when she discovers a body with fresh gunshot wounds by the local church. Is the mysterious man a victim or perpetrator? Jenna soon starts to unravel a mystery that gives her more questions than answers. It seems her victim's name is Luke and he's a time traveler. Shot over a century ago, Luke wakes to the modern world and must adjust to his new surroundings. With Jenna's help, he searches for the robbers' lost treasure, rights a wrong done to his family, and finds unexpected love in the woman who saved him. His deeds done, will Luke return to his own time or remain at Jenna's side to become a lawman of the future?

The Athenaeum, 1887 Journey Without a Map Donna Caruso, 2008

Even as generations pass, the pride of being Italian is in the genes of those who were raised in Italian immigrant families. Caruso's Journey Without a Map appropriately begins with pasta cooking instructions, and from that point, the aroma of tomatoes, olives, and red wine are never far from the stories she weaves of herself and the impact of her family. Whether making connections between her Uncle Nick's nose and her Roman ancestors or detailing the daily rituals of her shepherdess mother on the Italian hillsides, Caruso relays the information in broad, colourful strokes that are at once both inviting and humorous. With her earliest recollections of her family life in New Jersey, her father's grocery store, her mother's Catholic admonishments, the death of Santa Clause, the family habits, and the ever-present smells from the kitchen, she brings to us her sense of belonging to a rich heritage. But Caruso's journal and journey are not all feel-good, romanticized Italian immigrant experience. There are those reflections on her mother's life that are as beautiful and intense as they are revealing, the portraits of her extended family members that stand outside the warmth of family love and the tensions that develop when families are separated by geography and dreams. And though the wisdom of her father and mother guides her through her growing years, it would have to be their remembered love that guides Caruso through her own darkest hours of breast cancer and family break-up. As generations of North Americans move farther away from their immigrant experience and origins, Caruso's Journey Without a Map conveys that in our increasingly homogenized cultural world, what may best nourish us in our needs, shape us in our identities, and be our strength when we are weakest is our family's heritage and love.
