Canada: The State of the Federation 2015 John R.

Allan,David L.A. Gordon,Kyle Hanniman,André Juneau,2018-08-01 Renewing and expanding national infrastructure is critical to the wellbeing and productivity of Canadians and is one of the foremost challenges confronting our federal provincial and municipal governments Not only are the required investments dauntingly large for all three levels of government but so too is the required level of intergovernmental cooperation if our goals are to be realized The 2015 State of the Federation volume advances our understanding of these infrastructure challenges and identifies how best to resolve them The contributors to the volume provide historical or international comparative perspectives and utilize legal economic or administrative approaches to examine the nature and magnitude of the so called infrastructure deficit and the question of how best to finance the necessary investments The possible roles played by deficits and debt are considered together with options such as public private partnerships and asset recycling and a possible Aboriginal resource tax to finance the on reserve infrastructure needs of First Nations Considerable attention is also paid to pricing the use of infrastructure both to achieve efficiency in use and to avoid excess demand and an exaggerated perception of the required level of investment Other contributors examine the infrastructure investment decision processes at the federal and provincial levels and consider the optimal allocation of responsibility for infrastructure investments among the different levels of government and the related issue of the role of intergovernmental transfers to underwrite this allocation Political Exercise Lawrence D.

Brown,2022-03-08 The public health benefits of giving city dwellers increased opportunities to lead physically active lifestyles are well known to urban planners public health scholars and government officials Moreover increases in active living such as walking and cycling help the environment support local businesses and reduce traffic congestion among other advantages But despite wide agreement that active living is both achievable and valuable best practices are not easy to implement In Political Exercise Lawrence D Brown presents five case studies of cities that have promoted active living with varying success through a range of approaches He shows how and why the transformation of a call for public intervention into projects programs and policies is inescapably political Brown argues that in order to implement policies that support active living their proponents must give communities a sense of ownership of recommended changes in the built environment filter the public health agenda through a range of public and private organizations and secure committed political champions

At the intersection of public health and urban planning Political Exercise offers a framework for scholars policy makers and reformers to more productively address both the rationales behind active living and the political strategies that spur change
