Malatesha Joshi,P.G. Aaron,2013-05-13 Until about two decades ago the study of writing systems and their relationship to literacy acquisition was sparse and generally modeled after studies of English language learners This situation is now changing As the worldwide demand for literacy continues to grow researchers from different countries with different language backgrounds have begun examining the connection between their writing systems and literacy acquisition This text which derives from a NATO sponsored conference on orthography and literacy brings together the research of 70 scholars from across the world the largest assemblage of such experts to date Their findings are grouped into three parts as follows

Part I Literacy Acquisition in Different Writing Systems describes the relationship between orthography and literacy in twenty five orthographic systems This section serves as a handy reference source for understanding the orthographies of languages as diverse as Arabic Chinese English Icelandic Kannada and Kishwahili Part II Literacy Acquisition From a Cross Linguistic Perspective makes direct comparisons of literacy acquisition in English and other orthographic systems The overall conclusion that emerges from these eight chapters is that the depth of an orthographic system does influence literacy acquisition primarily by slowing down the acquisition of reading skills Even so studies show that dyslexic readers can be found across all orthographic systems whether shallow or deep which shows that dyslexia also has internal cognitive and biological components Part III Literacy Acquisition Instructional Perspectives explores literacy acquisition from developmental and instructional perspectives and ends with a look into the future of literacy research This Handbook is appropriate for scholars researchers and graduate students in such diverse fields as cognitive psychology psycholinguistics literacy education English as a second language and communication disorders

Language Mixing in Infant Bilingualism Elizabeth Lanza, 2004 This book addresses the issue of language contact in the context of child language acquisition Elizabeth Lanza examines in detail the simultaneous acquisition of Norwegian and

English by two first born children in families living in Norway in which the mother is American and the father Norwegian She connects psycholinguistic arguments with sociolinguistic evidence adding a much needed dimension of real language use in context to the psycholinguistic studies which have dominated the field She draws upon evidence from other studies to support her claims concerning language dominance and the child s differentiation between the two languages in relation to the situation interlocutor and the communicative demands of the context She also addresses the question of whether or not the language mixing of infant bilingualism is conceptually different from the codeswitching of older bilinguals thus helping to bridge the gap between these two fields of study Language Planning as a Sociolinguistic Experiment Ernst Hakon
