Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, at a pace of 3.0 to 3.5 miles per hour. The control group was instructed to continue their sedentary lifestyle. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The walking program resulted in significant improvements in physical and psychological health. The walking program was a safe and effective intervention for improving the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
