Encyclopedia of Portal Technologies and Applications Tatnall, Arthur, 2007-04-30 Informatique No More - Taking Back America Thomas Masters, 2019-11-13 No More Taking Back America by Dr Thomas Masters Tailspin Steven Brill, 2018-05-29 In this revelatory narrative covering the years 1967 to 2017 Steven Brill gives us a stunningly cogent picture of the broken system at the heart of our society He shows us how over the last half century America's core values meritocracy innovation due process free speech and even democracy itself have somehow managed to power its decline into dysfunction They have isolated our best and brightest whose positions at the top have never been more secure or more remote The result has been an erosion of responsibility and accountability an epidemic of shortsightedness an increasingly hollow economic and political center and millions of Americans gripped by apathy and hopelessness By examining the people and forces behind the rise of big money lobbying legal and financial engineering the demise of private sector unions and a hamstrung bureaucracy Brill answers the question on everyone's mind How did we end up this way Finally he introduces us to those working quietly and effectively to repair the damages At once a diagnosis of our national ills a history of their development and a prescription for a brighter future Tailspin is a work of riveting journalism and a welcome antidote to political despair

Latin America and Foreign Capital in the Twentieth Century Alan M. Taylor, 1999 Latin America began the twentieth century as a relatively poor region on the periphery of the world economy One cause of a low level of income per person was capital scarcity Long run growth via capital deepening requires either the mobilization of domestic capital through savings or large inflows of foreign capital Latin America's capital inflows were large by global standards at the century's turn and even up to the 1930s But after the 1930s Latin America was not so favored by foreign capital as compared with other peripheral regions for example the Asian economies The Great Depression is conventionally depicted as a turning point in Latin America for commercial policy and protectionism thus marking the onset of import substitution and a long run increase in barriers in international goods markets However this paper argues that policy responses in the 1930s and subsequent decades of relative economic retardation can be better understood as the cause and effect of the creation of long run barriers in international capital markets To support this notion I discuss the quantitative extent of these barriers and their effects on economic growth As for causality I argue that the political economy of institutional changes in the 1930s in the periphery might be understood in similar terms to those economic historians have used to discuss the macroeconomic crisis in the core Such a political economy model might thus have universal rather than core specific use It might predict the reactive and passive responses by periphery countries to external shocks and the persistence of such shocks in the postwar period In conclusion I touch on the important implications of these ideas for the current situation in Latin America where recent policy reforms aim to undo the last sixty years of isolation and reintegrate Latin America into the global economy
