The Quality of Science and Engineering at the NNSA National Security Laboratories National Research Council, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Laboratory Assessments Board, Committee to Review the Quality of the Management and of the Science and Engineering Research at the Department of Energy's National Security Laboratories--Phase II, 2013-09-10 The three National Nuclear Security Administration NNSA national security laboratories Los Alamos National Laboratory LANL Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory LLNL and Sandia National Laboratories SNL are a major component of the U S government's laboratory complex and of the national science and technology base. These laboratories are large, diverse, highly respected institutions with broad programs in basic sciences, applied sciences, technology development and engineering, and they are home to world class staff and facilities. Under a recent interagency agreement between the Department of Energy (DOE), Department of Defense, Department of Homeland Security and the intelligence community, they are evolving to serve the needs of the broad national security community. Despite this broadening of substance and support, these laboratories remain the unique locus of science and engineering. S 2 systems engineering and understanding of the effects of aging on system performance. 3 weapons science base and 4 modeling and simulation which provides a capability to integrate theory, experimental data and system design. The Quality of Science and Engineering at the NNSA National Security Laboratories offers a snapshot of the present with an eye to the future. This report discusses the current state of S E and makes recommendations to maintain robust programs.

Assessing the Accuracy of Vulnerability Models by Comparison with Vulnerability Experiments Michael W. Starks, 1989 Over the past three decades the business of vulnerability analysis has been conducted more as art than as science For a number of reasons there has been recent movement away from art and towards science One reason is internal to the Ballistic Research Laboratory If a substantial work force of scientists and engineers spends several decades doing vulnerability analysis it would be both surprising and disappointing if improved clarity and on the foundations of the subject were not achieved A second reason is the declining cachet associated with computer models Several decades ago it was virtually the case that if a quantitative result issued from a computer model it was sufficiently warranted as correct The crude extrapolations which then passed as vulnerability models benefited from that halo effect

Today people are understandably more skeptical about models Questions are asked and answers expected about accuracy and validation The pressure of such questioning has forced vulnerability analysts into seeking greater scientific respectability for the fruits of their labors A third cause of the scientific turn is the recent explosion of computer technology Vulnerability phenomena are complex realistic simulation was out of the question with the tools available to early vulnerability analysts
