Limnology in Australia P. de Deckker, W.D. Williams, 2012-12-06 Australia is the world's driest inhabited continent Water is our limiting resource It might therefore be thought that our water resources would be the subject of the most intensive study Certain aspects it must be conceded have received much attention notably the availability of water in terms of actual quantity The size of the surface water and the groundwater resource is well understood and indeed receives about as much study as can reasonably be expected in a country with as sparse a population and level of scientific manpower as ours Although the importance of understanding the water resource in terms of quantity is widely accepted what has not been generally appreciated is that for this resource to be available to human society for all the different uses to which it is put it is not sufficient that there exists within easy reach of the end users a certain total volume of water For that water to fulfil its functions for agriculture industry the home recreation biological conservation it must be in a certain state it must conform to certain chemical physical and biological criteria and what has not been sufficiently appreciated in Australian society is that the condition a water is in depends very much on the ecology of the waterbody in which it resides There are waterbodies in the world for example high altitude glacial lakes which are naturally so pristine that their water could be used for any purpose without treatment

Alford, 2019-04-23 CHOICE Highly recommended 2020 Insects are key components of life on our planet and their presence is essential for maintaining balanced terrestrial ecosystems Without insects humans would struggle to survive and on a world scale food production would be severely compromised Many plants and animals depend directly or indirectly on insects for their very survival and this is particularly so in the case of insectivorous birds and other such creatures The beneficial role of insects is often overlooked or misunderstood and in farming circles their very presence on crops is often seen to be unwelcome In reality however many insects are genuinely beneficial as in the case of parasitic and predacious species The use of chemical pesticides to control crop pests is becoming more tightly regulated and environmentally undesirable and low input farming in which natural enemies of pests are encouraged to survive or increase is becoming far more prevalent Accordingly Integrated Pest Management IPM and Integrated Pest Management ICM strategies are increasingly being developed advocated and adopted Features Highlights information on many groups of insects and mites that act as natural enemies or biological control agents of phytophagous insects and mites including plant pests Profusely illustrated with high quality colour photographs Focuses mainly on insects and mites as natural enemies of plant pests including parasitic and predacious species that have been accidentally or deliberately introduced in classical biological control programmes Reviews the role of phytophagous European insects and mites in controlling or managing European plants that have become invasive weeds in other parts of the world notably North America Australia and New Zealand
