Negotiating Economic Development Laurie Kroshus Medina, 2022-07-12 The citrus industry in Belize could be said to exist primarily to satisfy the needs of people in other countries A business that is highly dependent on global markets and the geopolitics of international trade it comprises some 500 farmers many hundreds of wage laborers and two processing companies that produce frozen juice concentrate for export This new study examines how those farmers laborers and companies define and pursue shared interests and how they respond differently to the impact of national development strategies and global economic and political forces Laurie Kroshus Medina analyzes the development of the citrus industry in Belize over fifteen years to explore the relationship between the production of collective identities and the negotiation of development policies at the interface of global and local processes She shows how citrus farmers and workers processing companies and politicians compete to construct shared identities how they mobilize collective actors and how their collective action shapes the goals policies and practices associated with development Taking an ethnographic approach Medina describes how the Belizean citrus industry responds to cycles of boom and bust and the implications of such cycles for workers and growers She offers a close look at the major actors workers union members small and large growers and politicians as they respond to global changes in the citrus industry Her analysis is made more compelling through an account of two open struggles in the industry over the formation of a rival union and the attempt to buy the processing company owned by the multinational corporation Nestl She also includes a discussion of the impact of NAFTA on the industry Medina's research demonstrates how collective agency in Belize has pushed the citrus industry's development in directions that simultaneously conform to and diverge from the trajectories laid out by foreign agencies Negotiating Economic Development provides a bridge from old to new studies of Latin American social movements as it offers key insights into competing forms of identity for a wide range of social scientists concerned with the human and social aspects of development issues and globalization

Lyon,E. Christian Wells,2012-03-15 Global tourism is perhaps the largest scale movement of goods services and people in history Consequently it is a significant catalyst for economic development and sociopolitical change While tourism increasingly accounts for ever greater segments of national economies the consequences of this growth for intercultural interaction are diverse and uncertain The proliferation of tourists also challenges classic theoretical descriptions of just what an economy is What are the commodities being consumed What is the division of labor between producers and clients in creating the value of tourist exchanges How do culture power and history shape these interactions What are the prospects for sustainable tourism How is cultural heritage being shaped by tourists around the world These critical questions inspired this volume in which the contributors explore the connections among economy sustainability heritage and identity that tourism and related processes makes explicit The volume moves beyond the limits of place specific discussions case studies and best practice examples Accordingly it is organized according to three overarching themes exploring dimensions of cultural heritage the multi faceted impacts of tourism on both hosts and guests and the nature of touristic encounters Based on ethnographic and archaeological research conducted in distinct locations the contributors conclusions and theoretical arguments reach far beyond the limits of isolated case studies Together they contribute to a new synthesis for the anthropology of tourism while simultaneously demonstrating how emerging theories of the economics of tourism can lead to the rethinking of traditionally non touristic enterprises from farming to medical occupations
