Transmitting Rights Brian Greenhill, 2015 When considering the structures that drive the global diffusion of human rights norms Brian Greenhill argues that we need to look beyond institutions that are explicitly committed to human rights and instead focus on the dense web of international government organizations IGOs some big some small some focused on human rights some not that has arisen in the last two generations While most of these organizations have no direct connection to human rights issues their participation in broader IGO networks has important implications for the human rights practices of their member states Featuring a rigorous empirical analysis Transmitting Rights shows that countries tend to adopt similar human rights practices to those of their IGO partners whether for better or worse Greenhill argues that IGOs constitute a tightly woven fabric of ties between states and that this network provides an important channel through which states can influence the behavior of others Indeed his analysis suggests that a policy of isolating rogue states is probably self defeating given that this will reduce their exposure to some of the more positive IGO based influences on their human rights Greenhill s analysis of the role of IGOs in rights diffusion will not only increase our understanding of the international politics of human rights it will also reshape how we think about the role of international institutions in world politics
