Intentions Behavior in Retail Hypermarket Kingdom of Saudi Arabia Samrena Jabeen, Abu Bakar Abdul

Hamid, 2019-06-27 Retail Service Quality is a vital driver in determining customer satisfaction which in turn promotes customer loyalty and reduces switching intentions. Service quality is a solution to build customer satisfaction which could lead to customer loyalty hence reducing switching intentions. The current study has investigated the interrelationship between service quality, customer satisfaction, customer loyalty with switching intentions of customers and the moderating role of price discounts and store ethnicity in a single framework. Random sampling was used by administering standardized questionnaires personally to 450 hypermarket customers located in the Eastern Province of Saudi Arabia. The results confirmed that retail service quality has significant positive influence on customer satisfaction and the positive effect of customer satisfaction on customer loyalty. Besides, the study verified store ethnicity and price discounts acted as moderating mechanisms for explaining the switching intentions of satisfied and loyal customers. The results serve as a guideline for top managers of the hypermarkets to design appropriate policies and strategies in terms of retail service quality, price discounts, and identifying the needs of ethnic groups in a particular region. This will help to enhance customer satisfaction and customer loyalty hence reducing switching intentions of customers.

Store Cards Market Investigation Great Britain: Competition Commission, 2006-04-21 In light of the concerns that have been raised about the lack of transparency of credit card charges in the UK particularly in relation to interest rates charged for store card credit, this matter was referred by the Office of Fair Trading to the Competition Commission in March 2004. The Commission's inquiry focuses on two key aspects: store card credit services to retailers and related insurance services and consumer credit through store cards and related insurance services. These cards offer a method of payment and credit option which are retailer specific and are mostly operated by department stores and clothing retailers. The investigation is based on data relating to the period from 1999 to 2003 supplemented by relevant information for 2004 and projections for 2005 and 2006 and focuses on the functioning of the market as a whole rather than on the conduct of individual companies. Issues examined include relevant economic markets and the wider regulatory framework, proposals to reform the legislation governing the credit market and statutory issues, factors that prevent, restrict or distort competition, detrimental effects on customers and options for remedial action. The report finds that the interest rates charged on store cards are too high, generally annual percentage rates (APRs) of between 10 to 20 per cent above required levels, resulting in an estimated cost for consumers of at least 55 million a year and possibly significantly more. A number of remedies are identified that store card credit providers should make, including warning cardholders on monthly statements that cheaper credit may be available elsewhere, providing more and clearer information on all monthly statements, offering an option to pay by direct debit and offering payment protection insurance separately from other elements of store card insurance.
