Hanson, 2020-12-03 The best-selling Mass Communication Living in a Media World presents a highly accessible introduction to mass communication that equips students with the critical thinking skills to become savvy media consumers. To help students better retain the material, author Ralph E. Hanson uses a storytelling approach that weaves in examples drawn from everyday life. Readers are encouraged to consider the media industry from the inside out and in doing so discover the many dimensions of mass communication that operate in our society. The thoroughly revised Eighth Edition highlights how social and digital media, video games, and the COVID-19 pandemic are changing the face of media. This title is accompanied by a complete teaching and learning package. Broadband in Europe Dan Madsen, Richard Marsden, American Enterprise Institute, Hal J. Singer, 2005-11-22 Broadband is a key enabler of the information society, increasing productivity and competitiveness across all sectors of the economy. Unlike traditional narrowband connections, broadband provides high-speed always-on connections to the Internet and supports innovative content and services. Direct consumer welfare gains from mass market adoption of broadband across the EU could easily reach 50 billion euros or more per annum. This is quite apart from the more profound societal shifts that ubiquitous broadband could bring. It may allow the individual to distribute content and ideas independent of traditional media and bring together communities of interest without regard to borders. Public policy for broadband will have a big impact on whether and how quickly these benefits are realised Getting policy right could bring large benefits for consumers firms and the economy at large getting policy wrong risks slowing both the rollout of broadband and new innovative services and thus the realisation of the EU's e Europe vision In this book we focus on the residential market for broadband access in EU countries analysing the current and prospective level of competition and deriving implications for public policy A key aim is to understand better the relative importance of facilities based and access based provision in fostering competition and promoting take up of broadband services

Low-latency and Robust Peer-to-peer Video Streaming

JeongHun Noh,2010 Peer to peer P2P systems have emerged as a promising and cost effective transport solution for streaming video to a group of users in the Internet In the P2P architecture users not only consume video but also forward it to other users Thus P2P systems scale better than client server systems as users bring resources to the system The challenge is to achieve low latency and robust video dissemination by overcoming a number of adversarial aspects and challenges peer dynamics heterogeneous uplink bandwidth of peers heterogeneous hardware and capabilities of peers and peer wise connection restrictions due to NATs firewalls This dissertation presents Stanford Peer to Peer Multicast SPPM a P2P video streaming system SPPM is designed to achieve low latency and robust streaming by constructing an overlay of multiple complementary trees and dynamically rearranging the position of peers by Active Overlay Management in a distributed fashion Next we extend SPPM for providing playback control to users by time shifted streaming To perform time shifted streaming peers store past portions of video and forward them to other users when requested thereby reducing server load To further alleviate server load we propose fast prefetching by which peers can disseminate content quickly Finally we present a way to accommodate mobile users Video transcoding is often required to adapt video for the mobile users We propose interleaved distributed transcoding IDT which allows a video stream to be transcoded at multiple peers that are more capable than mobile users IDT is shown not only to reduce computation required at a peer but also to achieve higher error resilience in case of peer failure or packet loss
