Oratory and Rhetoric in the Nineteenth-Century South W. Stuart Towns, 1998-10-30 The only modern collection of speeches by southerners on the themes that have shaped the history and culture of the region this anthology which spans eighty tumultuous years of southern history reflects the strategies of southern orators as they attempted to defend the indefensible as well as those few who advocated a more compassionate South Southern leaders were judged largely by their oratorical ability and their skills in defending the southern way of life Accordingly they placed much emphasis on developing consummate rhetorical skills Thus one can read the history of the region in the speeches of its politicians ministers and other public figures Beginning in 1820 with the debates over the admission of Missouri to the Union many southerners took a defensive posture against those forces from outside the region which they saw as threats to their culture While the rhetoric of most southern leaders was clearly defensive one must remember that they were dealing with the difficult issues of slavery the relationship of federal and state government their vision of the ideal society the coming civil war and its aftermath and living in a defeated desolate war torn region As demagogic defensive and archaic as they may seem today these speakers developed and expanded patterns of thought and rhetorical strategy that echoed throughout the region The collective memory that they created would shape their contemporaries and affect the lives of generations to follow these seemingly antithetical ideals to forge a new compound a wrathful moral ethic of righteous honor Dueling Cultures Damnable Legacies investigates the formation and proliferation of this white supremacist ideology that merged masculine bellicosity with religious devotion In 1856 when Edgefield native Preston Smith Brooks viciously beat the abolitionist Charles Sumner on the Senate floor the ideology of righteous honor reached its apogee and took national center stage Welborn analyzes the birth of this peculiar moral ethic in Edgefield and traces its increasing dominance across the American South in the buildup to the Civil War as white Southerners sought to cloak a war fought in defense of slavery in the language of honor and Christian piety

Holloway, 2014-12-15

Throughout the late nineteenth and early twentieth century the U.S. Congress engaged in bitter debates on whether to enact a federal law that would prosecute private citizens who lynched black Americans. In Getting Away with Murder the fundamental question under scrutiny is whether Southern Democrats' racist attitudes toward black Americans pardoned the atrocities of lynching. The book investigates underlying motives of opposition to Senate filibustering and invites an intellectual discussion on why Southern Democrats thought states' rights were the remedy to lynching when in fact the phenomenon was a baffling national crisis. A rebuttal to this query may include notions that congressional investigations into state-protected rights were deemed unconstitutional. In a unifying theme the appeal ties into questions of the federalism/civil rights debate by noting intervals that warrant research and advancing new perspectives intended to accentuate the matrices of race-based politics. To examine the federalism/civil rights debate this book asks three practical questions: 1. Would Southern Democrats suspend their friendships with private citizens and enact a federal law that would prosecute them for lynching? 2. Was the national government limited in its constitutional power to protect black Americans from private citizens who organized themselves as lynch mobs? 3. Were concerns for states' rights the core reasons for Senate filibustering or did Southern Democrats' argument for states' rights support the lie of racism?
