A Guide to Medieval Irish Architecture for Local Historians Tadhg O'Keeffe, 2010 Irelands landscape is dotted with remains of medieval buildings most of them in ruins As works of architecture these buildings have very specific stories to tell about the people who built them and about the societies in which they functioned but it is hard for historians to hear those stories without some knowledge of architecture This guide seeks to provide historians with the knowledge they need to tap into this great reservoir of information It reviews the different types of medieval building that one encounters in Ireland discusses their measurements materials and construction techniques explains their functions and provides a checklist of datable features and includes a guide to recording buildings Churches in Early Medieval Ireland Tomás Ó Carragáin, 2010 This is the first book devoted to churches in Ireland dating from the arrival of Christianity in the fifth century to the early stages of the Romanesque around 1100 including those built to house treasures of the golden age of Irish art such as the Book of Kells and the Ardagh chalice Carragáin s comprehensive survey of the surviving examples forms the basis for a far reaching analysis of why these buildings looked as they did and what they meant in the context of early Irish society Carragáin also identifies a clear political and ideological context for the first Romanesque churches in Ireland and shows that to a considerable extent the Irish Romanesque represents the perpetuation of a long established architectural tradition
