This book explores Medicare spending for physician services that has climbed more than 9 percent per year since 2000 Slowing the increase in Medicare outlays is important in fact it is becoming urgent Medicare s rising costs particularly when coupled with the projected growth in the number of beneficiaries threaten the sustainability of the program As discussed in this book the Medicare Trustees warn that even their unrealistically constrained estimate of Part B spending growth will still significantly out pace growth in the U S economy Thus Part B and total Medicare spending growth will continue to put pressure on the federal budget However that pressure puts other national priorities such as homeland security and education at risk This book examines the Medicare law that specifies a formula for calculating the annual update in payments for physicians services The concern of many members regarding the impact of potential payment reductions on patients access to services is looked at as well individuals who are 65 years of age and older and 8 million nonelderly people with permanent disabilities or end stage renal disease The Congressional Budget Office estimates that Medicare payments in 2010 will reach more than 500 billion Total per capita Medicare spending is not evenly distributed across the country and the proportion of beneficiaries living in metropolitan and nonmetropolitan areas also varies from state to state Because Medicare is a national program policy makers and researchers working to develop and implement its payment systems have long recognized the need to adjust payment amounts to reflect input price differences across geographic areas of the United States Report to the Congress ,1998
