Excerpt from The Mediterranean in the Ancient World Here again I have sought to expand my narrative for it concerns the sphere of national character which is too often left out of count in naval affairs Indeed I regard this First Punic War as next to that of Xerxes the greatest of the ancient world both in respect to the war fitness of the two opposing peoples and to the immeasurable greatness of the results obtained by victorious Rome On the other hand I pass over the Peloponnesian War because contrary to the initial assertion of Thucydides I consider that its results were little more than local and temporary except in so far as it weakened the Greek race About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
