Mega Projects The Changing Politics Of Urban Public Investment:

Mega-Projects Alan A. Altshuler, David E. Luberoff, 2004-05-13 A Brookings Institution Press and Lincoln Institute of Land Policy publication Since the demise of urban renewal in the early 1970s the politics of large scale public investment in and around major American cities has received little scholarly attention In Mega Projects Alan Altshuler and David Luberoff analyze the unprecedented wave of large scale mega public investments that occurred in American cities during the 1950s and 1960s the social upheavals they triggered which derailed large numbers of projects during the late 1960s and early 1970s and the political impulses that have shaped a new generation of urban mega projects in the decades since They also appraise the most important consequences of policy shifts over this half century and draw out common themes from the rich variety of programmatic and project developments that they chronicle The authors integrate narratives of national as well as state and local policymaking and of mobilization by mainly local project advocates with a profound examination of how well leading theories of urban politics explain the observed realities The specific cases they analyze include a wide mix of transportation and downtown revitalization projects drawn from numerous regions most notably Boston Denver Los Angeles New York City Chicago Atlanta Dallas Portland and Seattle While their original research focuses on highway airport and rail transit programs and projects they draw as well on the work of others to analyze the politics of public investment in urban renewal downtown retailing convention centers and professional sports facilities In comparing their findings with leading theories of urban and American politics Altshuler and Luberoff arrive at some surprising findings about which perform best and also reveal some important gaps in the literature as a whole In a concluding chapter they examine the potential effects of new fiscal pressures business mobilization to relax environmental constraints and security concerns in the wake of September 11 And they make clear their own views about how best to achieve a balance between developmental environmental and democratic values in public investment decisionmaking Integrating fifty years of urban development history with leading theories of urban and American politics Mega Projects provides significant new insights into urban and intergovernmental politics

Canada: The State of the Federation 2015 John R.

Allan,David L.A. Gordon,Kyle Hanniman,André Juneau,2018-08-01 Renewing and expanding national infrastructure is critical to the wellbeing and productivity of Canadians and is one of the foremost challenges confronting our federal provincial and municipal governments Not only are the required investments dauntingly large for all three levels of government but so too is the required level of intergovernmental cooperation if our goals are to be realized The 2015 State of the Federation volume advances our understanding of these infrastructure challenges and identifies how best to resolve them The contributors to the volume provide historical or international comparative perspectives and utilize legal economic or administrative approaches to examine the nature and magnitude of the so called infrastructure deficit and the question of how best to finance the necessary investments The possible roles played by deficits and debt are considered together with options such as public private partnerships and asset recycling and a possible Aboriginal resource tax to finance the on reserve infrastructure needs of First Nations Considerable attention is also paid to pricing the use of infrastructure both to achieve efficiency in use and to avoid excess demand and an exaggerated perception of the required level of investment Other contributors examine the infrastructure investment decision processes at the federal and provincial levels and consider the optimal allocation of responsibility for infrastructure investments among the different levels of government and the related issue of the role of intergovernmental transfers to underwrite this allocation Political Exercise Lawrence D.

Brown,2022-03-08 The public health benefits of giving city dwellers increased opportunities to lead physically active lifestyles are well known to urban planners public health scholars and government officials Moreover increases in active living such as walking and cycling help the environment support local businesses and reduce traffic congestion among other advantages But despite wide agreement that active living is both achievable and valuable best practices are not easy to implement In Political Exercise Lawrence D Brown presents five case studies of cities that have promoted active living with varying success through a range of approaches He shows how and why the transformation of a call for public intervention into projects programs and policies is inescapably political Brown argues that in order to implement policies that support active living their proponents must give communities a sense of ownership of recommended changes in the built environment filter the public health agenda through a range of public and private organizations and secure committed political champions

At the intersection of public health and urban planning Political Exercise offers a framework for scholars policy makers and reformers to more productively address both the rationales behind active living and the political strategies that spur change
