Work with One-Syllable Words and Word Parts

Ask students what they need to know about syllables before they begin. Ask them to write a syllable in a group of letters that has a single vowel sound. A syllable can be a word or part of a word. The words stop, with, jump, and I am one-syllable words. Other examples of syllables that are not words are my, fish, and job.

Reading

ORAL/WRIT Students will correctly identify, pronounce, and read VC words and syllables.

Practice Page 2a

- Tell students that one kind of syllable is called a closed syllable. There are three things to remember about a closed syllable:
 1. It has only one vowel.
 2. The vowel has a short sound.
 3. It ends in a consonant.
- Show the short vowel sounds with students by recapping what we learn about VC words. It is important to be the teacher for words controlled.
- Then display the closed-syllable words at, stop, and jump. Tell students that they are all examples of closed syllables that are words, but not all words have a vowel sound in the middle. Ask the students to read the words aloud, point out the final consonants, and read the word aloud.
- Tell students that they are going to read some closed-syllable words. Have students read independently or with one like friend and on the top of 2a. They have their complete the page making sure they understand the directions for each activity.
- For Activity 2, write the following words:

DECODING 1. stop 2. with 3. fish 4. stop 5. jump 6. with

Practice Page 2b-2c

- Display the closed-syllable words at, stop, and jump. Explain that these closed syllables are not words themselves, but are parts of words. Tell them that they are short words and read in a consonant for each syllable. Have students point out the vowel, say the vowel sound, point out the final consonant, and read the syllable word.
