The Mélusine Romance in Medieval Europe Lydia Zeldenrust, 2020 Readers have long been fascinated by the enigmatic figure of Mélusine a beautiful fairy woman cursed to transform into a half serpent once a week whose part monstrous sons are the ancestor of several European noble houses This study is the first to consider how this romance developed from a local legend to European bestseller analysing versions in French German Castilian Dutch and English It addresses questions on how to study medieval literature from a European perspective moving beyond national canons and reading Mélusine's bodily mutability as a metaphor for how the romance itself moves and transforms across borders It also analyses key changes to the romance's content form and material presentation including its images and traces how the people who produced and consumed this romance shaped its international transmission and spread The author shows how Mélusine's character is adapted within each local context while also uncovering previously unknown connections between the different branches of this multilingual tradition Moving beyond established paradigms of separate national traditions manuscript versus print and medieval versus Renaissance literature the book integrates literary analysis with art historical and book historical approaches LYDIA ZELDENRUST is a Leverhulme Early Career Fellow at the Department of English and Related Literature at the University of York the abundant writings by early modern women to disclose the extent of their participation in the culture of Spain and the New World They investigate how women playwrights poets novelists and nuns applied their education both to promote literature and to challenge the male dominated hierarchy of church and state Moreover they shed light on how women whose writings were not considered literary also took part in the gendering of Hispanic culture through letters and autobiographies among other means and on how that same culture depicted women s education in the visual arts and the literature of the period
