

MID-ATLANTIC AMERICAN SPORTS CAR RACES

TERRY O'NEIL
1953-1962

The history of sports car racing in the states of Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Washington D.C. has long been talked of, though never documented in any organised and detailed fashion. While reports containing top-three finishing places in the races held at Cumberland, Marlboro and Virginia International Raceway sometimes appeared in the press, many other venues were barely mentioned. Were it not for a few members of the SCCA Washington D.C. Region many of the scant records of race events that do remain would have been lost forever.

This is the story of a period when sports car drivers such as Jim Kimberly, Charlie Hayes and Dick Thompson competed mainly for tin cups and glory on the civil airport runways and small private tracks before the age of professionalism really took hold. They drove mainly European cars, Ferraris, Jaguars and Maseratis among others, some considered valuable and rare by many avid collectors. The histories of these cars are now of great interest and many are mentioned by chassis number which will aid current owners in their research.

This account has been compiled from research in local newspapers, national motor magazines and interviews with some of the people who took part in the races.

Over 2,000 drivers and 900 cars entered onto more than nineteen tracks in the Mid-Atlantic states: Delaware, Kentucky, Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia.
