

FINANCIAL AID FOR COLLEGE

Don't panic about those scary high costs of attendance you see posted on college websites. Lots of students actually pay through grants, scholarships and other "free" funds by the time all is said and done. To make sure your family gets its fair share of financial aid, follow these very easy steps.

1. ESTABLISH A PLAN

KNOW WHAT YOU WANT

Think about the percentage of family income you want to pay for college. Do you want to attend an out-of-state school? Will you be able to live on campus or at home? If you know your school's cost of attendance, you can figure out how much you can afford to pay.

FIND A FINANCIAL "SAFETY SCHOOL"

Look for schools that give you a good chance of getting a scholarship. If you're a high-achieving student, look for schools that offer merit scholarships. If you're a low-income student, look for schools that offer need-based aid.

GET UP IN THE AIR

Apply to as many schools as you can. The more schools you apply to, the more likely you are to get a scholarship or other financial aid.

customers who think that their credit scores just don't really matter. These sorts of misconceptions can hurt your chances at some jobs at good interest rates and even your chances of getting some apartments. The truth is if you have a bank account and bills then you have a credit score and your credit score matters more than you might think. Your credit score may be called many things including a credit risk rating, a FICO score, a credit rating, a FICO rating, or a credit risk score. All these terms refer to the same thing: the three-digit number that lets lenders get an idea of how likely you are to repay your bills. Every time you apply for credit, apply for a job that requires you to handle money, or even apply for some more exclusive types of apartment living, your credit score is checked. In fact, your credit score can be checked by anyone with a legitimate business need to do so. Your credit score is based on your past financial responsibilities and past payments and credit, and it provides potential lenders with a quick snapshot of your current financial state and past repayment habits. In other words, your credit score lets lenders know quickly how much of a credit risk you are. Based on this credit score, lenders decide whether to trust you financially and give you better rates when you apply for a loan. Apartment managers can use your credit score to decide whether you can be trusted to pay your rent on time. Employers can use your credit score to decide whether you can be trusted in a high responsibility job that requires you to handle money. The problem with credit scores is that there is quite a bit of misinformation circulated about, especially through some less than scrupulous companies who claim they can help you with your credit report and credit score for a cost, of course. From advertisements and suspect claims, customers sometimes come away with the idea that in order to boost their credit score, they have to pay money to a company or leave credit repair in the hands of so-called experts. Nothing could be further from the truth. It is perfectly possible to pay down debts and boost your credit on your own with no expensive help whatsoever. In fact, the following 101 tips can get you well on your way to boosting your credit score and saving you money. By the end of this ebook, you will be able to: Define a credit score, a credit report, and other key financial terms; Develop a personalized credit repair plan that addresses your unique financial situation; Find the resources and people who can help you repair your credit score; Repair your credit effectively using the very techniques used by credit repair experts. This book will teach you the powerful strategies you need to build the financial habits that will help you to keep a high credit risk rating. It really is that simple. Start reading and be prepared to start taking small but powerful steps that can have a dramatic impact on your financial life.

How the Financial Crisis and Great Recession Affected Higher Education Jeffrey R.

Brown, Caroline M. Hoxby, 2024-05-31 The recent financial crisis had a profound effect on both public and private universities which faced shrinking endowments, declining charitable contributions, and reductions in government support. Universities responded to these stresses in different ways. This volume presents new evidence on the nature of these responses and on how the incentives and constraints facing different institutions affected their behavior. The studies in this volume explore how various practices at institutions of higher education such as the drawdown of endowment resources the awarding of financial aid and spending on research responded to the financial crisis The studies examine universities as economic organizations that operate in a complex institutional and financial environment The authors examine the role of endowments in university finances and the interaction of spending policies asset allocation strategies and investment opportunities They demonstrate that universities behavior can be modeled using economic principles
