Audible Geographies in Latin America Dylan Lamar Robbins, 2019-09-28 Audible Geographies in Latin America examines the audibility of place as a racialized phenomenon It argues that place is not just a geographical or political notion but also a sensorial one shaped by the specific profile of the senses engaged through different media Through a series of cases the book examines racialized listening criteria and practices in the formation of ideas about place at exemplary moments between the 1890s and the 1960s Through a discussion of Louis Moreau Gottschalk's last concerts in Rio de Janeiro and a contemporary sound installation involving telegraphs by Otávio Schipper and Sérgio Krakowski Chapter 1 proposes a link between a sensorial economy and a political economy for which the racialized and commodified body serves as an essential feature of its operation Chapter 2 analyzes resonance as a racialized concept through an examination of phonograph demonstrations in Rio de Janeiro and research on dancing manias and hypnosis in Salvador da Bahia in the 1890s Chapter 3 studies voice and speech as racialized movements informed by criminology and the proscriptive norms defining white Spanish in Cuba Chapter 4 unpacks conflicting listening criteria for an optics of blackness in national sounds developed according to a gendered set of premises that moved freely between diaspora and empire national territory and the fraught politics of recorded versus performed music in the early 1930s Chapter 5 in the context of Cuban Revolutionary cinema of the 1960s explores the different facets of noise both as a racialized and socially relevant sense of sound and as a feature and consequence of different reproduction and transmission technologies Overall the book argues that these and related instances reveal how sound and listening have played more prominent roles than previously acknowledged in place making in the specific multi ethnic colonial contexts characterized by diasporic populations in Latin America and the Caribbean Fantasmas, novias y otros compañeros Elly Strik,2014 Elly Strik s work drawings and paintings on paper features brides birth rituals and rebirth witches and mystics heaven and dreams in a dialogue with certain aspects from El Greco Goya Darwin Freud Munch Ensor and Duchamp 0Strik s approach is instinctive excessive and completely focused on itself With her strong and poetic research she explores the potential of metamorphosis and the process of artistic creation In her mutant like figures turned into shapes portraits and figures on paper the inner and outer look are simultaneous and create a visual provocation that forces the onlooker to reflect on the human condition Exhibition Reina Sof a National Art Centre Madrid Spain 22 1 26 5 2014 New Books on Women, Gender and Feminism ,2013 New Books on Women and Feminism ,2013 Ventriloquized Bodies Janet L.
