Vowel Prosthesis in Romance Rodney Sampson,2009-10-29 This book presents for the first time an in depth historical account of vowel prosthesis in the Romance languages Vowel prosthesis is a change which involves the appearance of a non etymological vowel at the beginning of a word a familiar example is the initial e which appears in the development of Latin sperare to Spanish esperar and French esp rer to hope Despite its widespread incidence in the Romance languages it has remained poorly studied In his wide ranging comparative coverage Professor Sampson identifies three main categories of vowel prosthesis that have occurred and explores in detail their historical trajectory and the relationship between them The presentation draws freely throughout on the rich philological materials available from Romance and brings to light various unexpected changes in the productive use of prosthesis through time For example in French and Italian which is Tuscan based one category of prosthesis became well established in the early Middle Ages only to lose productivity and subsequently become moribund With its extensive use of empirical data and findings from theoretical linguistics the book offers a thorough and revealing account of a fascinating chapter in the phonological history of Romance

Segmental and prosodic issues in Romance phonology Pilar Prieto, Joan Mascaró, Maria-Josep Solé, 2007-04-06 This volume is a collection of cutting edge research papers written by well known researchers in the field of Romance phonetics and phonology An important goal of this book is to bridge the gap between traditional Romance linguistics with its long and rich tradition in data collection cross language comparison and phonetic variation and laboratory phonology work The book is organized around three main themes segmental processes prosody and the acquisition of segments and prosody The various articles provide new empirical data on production perception sound change first and second language learning rhythm and intonation presenting a state of the art overview of research in laboratory phonology centred on Romance languages The Romance data are used to test the predictions of a number of theoretical frameworks such as gestural phonology exemplar models generative phonology and optimality theory The book will constitute a useful companion volume for phoneticians phonologists and researchers investigating sound structure in Romance languages and will serve to generate further interest in laboratory phonology

Current Issues in Romance Languages Teresa Satterfield, Christina Tortora, Diana Cresti, 2002 This book presents an enlightening collection of papers contributing to theoretical discussions across many topics within the study of Romance Languages and Linguistics The work originates from the 29th Linguistic Symposium on Romance Languages held in 1999 at the University of Michigan Ann Arbor although only a small subpart of the proceedings papers are included in this volume The selected papers have been reworked for the current publication

Coarticulation and Sound Change in Romance Daniel Recasens, 2014-04-15 This volume should be of great interest to phoneticians phonologists and both historical and cognitive linguists Using data from the Romance languages for the most part the book explores the phonetic motivation of several sound changes e g glide insertions and elisions vowel and consonant insertions elisions assimilations and dissimilations Within the framework of the DAC degree of articulatory constraint model of coarticulation it clearly demonstrates that the typology and direction of these sound changes may very largely be accounted for by the coarticulatory effects occurring between adjacent or neighbouring phonetic segments and by the degrees of articulatory constraint imposed by speakers on the production of vowels and consonants The phonetically based explanations presented here are formulated on the basis of coarticulation data from speech production and perception research carried out during the last fifty years and are complemented with data on the co occurrence of phonetic segments in lexical forms of the languages being considered Attention is also paid to the role that positional and prosodic factors play in sound change implementation as well as to the cognitive and peripheral strategies involved in segmental replacements elisions and insertions

The Production of Consonant Clusters Daniel Recasens, 2018-02-19 The book analyzes the articulatory motivation of several adaptation processes place assimilations blending coarticulation involving consecutive consonants in heterosyllabic consonant sequences within the framework of the degree of articulatory constraint model of coarticulation It also shows that the homorganic relationship between two heterosyllabic consonants contributes to the implementation of manner assimilations while heterorganicity as well as sonorancy and voicing in the syllable onset C2 are key factors in the weakening of the syllable coda C1 Experimental and descriptive evidence is provided with production phonological and sound change data from several languages and more specifically with tongue to palate contact and lingual configuration data for Catalan consonant sequences The book also reviews critically research on the c center effect in tautosyllabic consonant sequences which has been carried out during the last thirty years
