

This passage is about sleep.

The average adult needs between seven and nine hours of sleep per day in order to be healthy, both physically and mentally. But, this daily amount of sleep seems to be becoming increasingly rare. People nowadays appear not to understand how essential sleep is, with many well-known businesspeople and politicians famously claiming to get through the day perfectly well without it. Yet lack of sleep can have serious consequences: increased likelihood of accidents, reduced productivity at work, problems with health, and even premature aging and death.

Sleeplessness is a modern epidemic, yet the roots of the problem began in the 18th century. People left their peaceful countryside homes and started a new life in cities that were overcrowded and noisy – conditions not exactly suitable for a good night's rest. What's more, the new cities were filled with activity and entertainment at night, including coffee shops. Instead of hitting the sack at sunset, the new generations of city dwellers would stay up late at night, enjoying long discussions powered by caffeine.

Then came the electric light bulb. Though gas lamps had long been in use, it was the electric bulb that provided light that was sufficiently bright to keep people wide awake. This had in fact been one of the aims of Thomas A. Edison, the inventor of this new technology. Edison believed that people could use their time more efficiently if they had enough light, even late at night. Perhaps he succeeded more than he would have expected.

75. What point is the writer making in the first paragraph?
 - a. Many people do not realize the importance of sleep.
 - b. Most people need at least nine hours of sleep.
 - c. It is possible to work efficiently without much sleep.
 - d. Too much sleep can result in health problems.
76. What does it refer to at the end of sentence 3 of paragraph 1?
 - a. being fitter
 - b. enough sleep
 - c. less productivity
 - d. becoming old
77. What does the writer say about the 18th century?
 - a. Most people lived in peaceful homes.
 - b. People mostly had no problem sleeping.
 - c. People did not usually drink coffee.
 - d. Many people moved to the cities.
78. What does hitting the sack mean in sentence 4 of paragraph 2?
 - a. staying awake
 - b. drinking coffee
 - c. going to bed
 - d. making noise
79. What can we infer about gas lamps?
 - a. They were more effective than light bulbs.
 - b. They were not commonly used in the countryside.
 - c. They were not as bright as electric bulbs.
 - d. They were invented by Thomas Edison.
80. What is one of the main purposes of this text?
 - a. to suggest ways that people can get enough sleep
 - b. to describe how sleeplessness came to be a problem
 - c. to propose people should return to the countryside

How Do You Spell Development? Margareta Sjöström, Rolf Sjöström, 1983 Journal of the National Education Association, 1954 Productivity in Higher Education Caroline M. Hoxby, Kevin Stange, 2020-01-10 How do the benefits of higher education compare with its costs and how does this comparison vary across individuals and institutions These questions are fundamental to quantifying the productivity of the education sector The studies in Productivity in Higher Education use rich and novel administrative data modern econometric methods and careful institutional analysis to explore productivity issues The authors examine the returns to undergraduate education differences in costs by major the productivity of for profit schools the productivity of various types of faculty and of outcomes the effects of online education on the higher education market and the ways in which the productivity of different institutions responds to market forces The analyses recognize five key challenges to assessing productivity in higher education the potential for multiple student outcomes in terms of skills earnings invention and employment the fact that colleges and universities are multiproduct firms that conduct varied activities across many domains the fact that students select which school to attend based in part on their aptitude the difficulty of attributing outcomes to individual institutions when students attend more than one and the possibility that some of the benefits of higher education may arise from the system as a whole rather than from a single institution The findings and the approaches illustrated can facilitate decision making processes in higher education
