Prevention Targeting Mental Health and Nonsuicidal Self-injury in Adolescents Erik Aspegqvist, 2025-05-07

Adolescent mental health is today a topic raising great concern and reports of rising rates of mental health problems have led some to call the situation a mental health crisis. In parallel with this there has been a realization that nonsuicidal self-injury (NSSI) is something affecting an increasingly large share of adolescents. The fact that resources are limited together with the knowledge of the burden of mental health problems have spurred a great interest in prevention. Schools are seen as arenas with great potential for deploying preventive interventions targeting adolescents. The available evidence for such interventions is however limited and there is a need to better understand how they could be more effective. The present thesis aims to contribute to the scientific knowledge about school-based mental health prevention by investigating the effects of a whole school prevention program to explore adolescents' experiences of taking part in such a program and to shed light on heterogeneity among adolescents with a history of NSSI as well as mechanisms underlying engagement in NSSI. In Study I the aim was to investigate emotion regulation and trauma symptoms as potential mediators of the association between childhood abuse and NSSI. In a sample $N = 3\,169$ of data from community adolescents, mediation was investigated using structural equation modeling. Both emotion regulation and trauma symptoms were found to partly mediate the relationship between childhood abuse and NSSI and together to mediate this association completely. Study conclusions were that emotion regulation and trauma symptoms seem to be what drives NSSI rather than experiences of childhood abuse themselves. Study II aimed to investigate characteristics of the subgroups of adolescents acknowledging NSSI when answering a dichotomous yes/no question versus a checklist with NSSI behaviors in a sample $N = 266$ of community adolescents. These groups were found to be large and to differ from each other in several respects with implications both in clinical and research settings. Further cluster analysis was employed in order to identify subgroups among adolescents with NSSI and finding such subgroups to be different from each other it was concluded that there was a need for greater awareness of the heterogeneity within NSSI. In Study III the effects of a whole school preventive intervention were evaluated in longitudinal data from the same sample as in Study II $N = 183$ with complete data from three points of measurement harnessing the cluster randomized controlled design of the overall project. Effects were found on NSSI frequency which decreased at post-intervention and on Stigma Awareness which increased. Conclusions of Study III was that a whole school preventive intervention can be effective in reducing NSSI frequency and in increasing adolescents' awareness of mental health stigma. Study IV was a qualitative group interview study employing thematic analysis in order to explore adolescents' experiences of taking part in the whole school preventive intervention as well as their perspectives on mental health. Key findings were the identification of a autonomy/help-seeking dilemma and the perceived need of interventions targeting mental health among adolescents. In conclusion the present thesis adds to the knowledge about prevention targeting NSSI and mental health among adolescents by documenting effects of a whole school prevention program. Further the thesis provides insights related to school-based
