What you worship is not first shown on Sunday morning, but demonstrated by your words and behavior the rest of the week.

The word worship is widely misunderstood. Most people who hear the word worship immediately think of some kind of corporate, formal religious activity. Perhaps what comes to mind is a gathering of pilgrims to lay candles at the feet of Buddha, the singing of a hymn with a thousand fellow believers, or a gathering of a small group on a Wednesday night. In other words, for most people, worship is a word that summarizes the outward spiritual activity of their lives. But the Bible implies that word in a fundamentally different way.

The Bible portrays us not just as people who occasionally worship, but as worshippers. It's not just that we have a religious aspect to our being. No, this worship thing is much more fundamental than that. We have been designed by God to be worshippers. This means that worship is first our voluntary belief in what becomes our activity. The worship inclination or inclination that resides in all our hearts was placed there to draw us to God, the One to whom we were made to give our worship. There is no such thing as a non-worshipping human being. The only thing that divides human beings is what or whom they worship.

What is it, then, that we're talking about when we say that we are all worshippers? Well, this means that we all attach our values, our hopes and dreams, our sense of self being, and our meaning and purpose to something. We all give the functional control of our hearts to something. We all live after something. We all tend to remember to and not to what we think will give us life.

Scripture says that there are only two possible objects of our worship: the unseen God, the source of our thoughts, or, you are either worshipping the Creator, or worshipping your life to him, or you are in some worship of some part of his creation. You submit in all to whatever in some way. We all put ourselves, other people, or other things in God's rightful place.

Worship of the one true and living God is the only place where life can be found, and worship of anything else is a pathway to death.

Sunday, every word you say, every choice you make, and every action you do will be shaped by some kind of worship. Nothing depicts your need for the grace of Jesus better than the way of worship that will reign in your heart today.

JUNE 23

Good is good when it praises what God loves, but it's dangerous when it questions God's goodness and love.

When you're taken to the struggle of Isaiah 46, you've been there:

But as for me, my heart had always stumbled,
my steps had nearly slipped.
For I was fearful of the arrogant,
when I saw the prosperity of the wicked.
For they have no pains and do not die;
their bodies are fat and sleek.
They are not as I trouble, as others are;
they are not as I am like the rest of mankind.
Behold, there are the wicked,
plotted against, they receive no relief.
All we vain have I kept my heart from,
and washed my hands in innocence.
For all the day long I have been without and refused every morning.
When my soul was comforted,
when I was perched in safety,
I was hostile and spiteful;
I was like a beast torn and torn. (Ps. 73:2-4, 12-14, 24-25)

Isaiah is mourning, all right, but it's all the wrong kind of mourning. He is filled with grief, but it's a dangerous, angry, and unproductive grief. It's heartache. You felt Isaiah's feelings. It's not unlike yours. In a fallen world, you have serious sorrows. You should mourn your struggle with sin. You should mourn the ways, broken condition of the fallen world that is your home address. You should mourn corruption, injustice, poverty, pollution, and disease. It is right to mourn these things, but you had better guard your mourning. Your mourning is most harmful, you are not mourning with God, who weeps for the condition of the world he made, or just mourning against God, questioning his goodness, wisdom, and love.

It's tempting to do this because you feel moments when the contrast between what you are facing in a child of God and what the person next to you—a person who ignores God—is facing is almost too much to take. It seems that the good guy is being humiliated and the bad guy has it easy. In the face of this reality, Isaiah eventually says, "I've observed, and this is what I see!" It's an angry charge against the goodness of God. Where you don't understand what's going on, you're God's goodness rather than questioning whether it's even his will. Isaiah, "My deeds and my heart mean that, but God is the strength of my heart and my greatest helper" in 38.
