Withdrawing and Withholding Treatments Liam Strand, 2025-04-16 When medical treatments are not deemed cost effective given considerations of e.g. needs and severity and therefore denied reimbursement the treatment is commonly withheld from all future patients. However, should the treatment also be withdrawn from patients who have gained early access to it? Previous normative analyses and clinical guidelines suggest that treatments should be equally rationed by both withdrawing and withholding, but empirical studies and policy practices indicate that withholding is more acceptable than withdrawing. It has been suggested that psychological difficulties associated with withdrawing cause this discrepancy, but this remains a hypothesis rather than an experimentally tested explanation. The overall aim of the thesis is to explore ethical and psychological aspects of withdrawing treatments in relation to cost effectiveness, given that withholding is justified. In addition, there is an ambition to formulate ethically justified reimbursement recommendations that account for psychological factors in human judgement and decision making. The specific research questions are: What are physicians and patient organisation representatives' experiences and perceptions of withdrawing and withholding treatments in rationing situations due to relative scarcity? Paper I: To what extent do people express an ethical difference between withdrawing and withholding treatments in reimbursement decisions? Papers II-III: How do different possibly morally relevant circumstances shape support for rationing by withdrawing and withholding? Papers II-III: What could be a balanced and justified approach to withdrawing and withholding treatments in healthcare priority setting? Paper IV: In Paper I, an interview study was conducted with physicians and patient organisation representatives. In Papers II and III, two experiments tested differences in acceptance of rationing treatments by withdrawing and withholding. In addition, Paper II presents the importance of decision level (policy or bedside) while Paper III presents the importance of different potentially morally relevant circumstances previously identified in Paper I. Paper IV presents a normative analysis using a reflective equilibrium process to formulate balanced and justified recommendations on how to withdraw and withhold treatments in reimbursement decisions. Paper I showed nuanced perceptions of withdrawing and withholding treatments. In some respects, the two rationing types were deemed ethically equivalent, while in other respects they were considered ethically inequivalent. Paper II found that 18% of participants accepted withdrawing treatments at the policy level, compared to 29% acceptance for withholding treatments at the policy level, and 25% acceptance for withdrawing treatments at the bedside level. Paper III found no general difference in acceptance between withdrawing and withholding treatments. However, differences emerged when analysing specific circumstances where withholding was viewed as more problematic than withdrawing in four out of eleven circumstances. Across Papers II and III, the overall support for rationing was low. Paper IV analysed the ethical acceptability of withdrawing treatments given that withholding is acceptable as well as the ethical acceptability of providing patients with early access to treatments financed by the healthcare system. It is suggested that withdrawing treatments is ethically acceptable but when patients are granted early access a practice where physicians inform patients that the treatment will be withdrawn if it does not get reimbursed is required. The main conclusions of the thesis can be summarised as follows. In some respects treatment withdrawal is deemed as ethically equivalent to withholding while in other aspects it is deemed as ethically more problematic.

Paper I When presented with a detailed vignette of the rationing situation people express withdrawing to be less acceptable than withholding. Paper II However when presented with short and concise statements no general difference is perceived. Paper III Withdrawing is deemed more acceptable at the bedside level than at the policy level. Paper II However different circumstances can render withholding equally and sometimes even more unacceptable than withdrawing. Paper III An ethically balanced and justified approach to withdrawing and withholding treatments is that if withholding is acceptable then withdrawing is too. Early access is in principle problematic but if early access is to be given physicians must inform patients that the treatment will be withdrawn if it does not get reimbursed.

Paper IV När medicinska behandlingar inte bedöms vara kostnadseffektiva givet att behandlingen exempelvis tagit hänsyn till behov och svårighetsgrad och därmed nekats ersättning så tåls vanligtvis inte behandlingen inför framtida patienter. När behandlingen dock avslutas för patienter som fått tidigt tillgång till den tidigare normativa analysen och kliniska riktlinjer föreslås att behandlingar ska avslutas och inte strävas in på ett likvärdigt sätt. Detta visar empiriska studier och policypraxis att det är mer accepterat att inte sträva in på behandlingar än att avsluta dem. En möjlig förklaring är att de psykologiska svårigheterna med att avsluta behandlingar orsakar denna skillnad men också ligger detta bara en hypotes och inte en experimentellt testad förklaring. Syftet med avhandlingen är att utforska etiska och psykologiska aspekter kring att avsluta och inte sträva in på behandlingar i relation till kostnadseffektivitet givet att det är acceptabelt att inte sträva in på behandling. Det finns även en ambition om att formulera etiskt riktiga rekommendationer vid ersättningsbeslut som tar hänsyn till psykologiska faktorer i medicinskt omdöme och beslutsfattande. De specifika forskningsfrågorna är: Vad är läkarens och patientorganisationsrepresentanters erfarenheter av och uppfattningar om att avsluta och inte sträva in på behandlingar i ersättningsbeslut kopplade till relativ knapphet. Delstudie I I vilken utsträckning uttrycker folk en etisk skillnad mellan att avsluta och inte sträva in på behandlingar i ersättningsbeslut. Delstudier II III Hur påverkar olika potentiellt moraliskt relevanta omständigheter såsom att ransonera genom att avsluta och inte sträva in på behandlingar. Delstudier II III Vad skulle vara ett balanserat och riktigt tillvägagångssätt att avsluta och inte sträva in på behandlingar inom hälso- och sjukvårdsprioriteringar. Delstudie IV I Delstudie I genomfördes en intervjustudie med läkare och patientorganisationsrepresentanter. I Delstudie II och III genomfördes två experimentella studier som testade skillnader i acceptans för att ransonera behandlingar genom att avsluta och inte sträva in på. Delstudie II undersökte även vikten av beslutsnivå, policy eller patientnära medan Delstudie III undersökte vikten av olika potentiellt moraliskt relevanta omständigheter som tidigare identifierats i Delstudie I. I Delstudie IV genomfördes en normativ

analys genom att använda sig av en reflektivt ekvilibrium process för att formulera rekommendationer om att avsluta och inte sätta in behandlingar i samband med ersättningsbeslut Delstudie I visade nyanserade uppfattningar om att avsluta och inte sätta in behandlingar i vissa aspekter sågs det tydligt att ransonera behandlingar som etiskt likvärdiga medan i andra aspekter sågs de som etiskt olikvärdiga Delstudie II visade att 18% ansåg det acceptabelt att avsluta behandlingar på policyniv jämfört med 29% som accepterade att inte sätta in behandlingar på policyniv och 25% som accepterade att avsluta behandlingar på en patientnära nivå Delstudie III visade ingen generell skillnad i acceptans mellan att avsluta och inte sätta in behandlingar Däremot framkom det skillnader när specifika omständigheter analyserades där att inte sätta in sågs som mer problematiskt när att avsluta under fyra av elva omständigheter Genom Delstudie II och III var det generella stödet för ransonering lågt Delstudie IV analyserade den etiska acceptansen av att avsluta behandlingar givet att det var acceptabelt att inte sätta in Studien undersökte också den etiska acceptansen av att ge patienter tidig tillgång till behandlingar som finansieras av hälso- och sjukvårdssystemet Det föreslås att avsluta behandlingar var etiskt acceptabelt men när patienter fick tidig tillgång behövdes en praktik där läkaren informerar patienten om att behandlingen kommer att avslutas om behandlingen får ett negativt ersättningsbeslut Avhandlingens huvudslutsatser kan sammanfattas som I vissa aspekter ses avslut och inte sätta in som etiskt likvärdiga medan i andra aspekter ses avslut som etiskt mer problematiskt Delstudie I När folk presenterade för en vinjett som beskriver en ransoneringssituation uttrycker de att avsluta var mindre acceptabelt när att inte sätta in Delstudie II När folk presenterade för korta och koncisa påstenden uttrycker de ingen generell skillnad Delstudie III Att avsluta behandlingar var mer acceptabelt på en patientnära nivå på policyniv än Delstudie II Däremot under vissa omständigheter kan inte sätta in vara likvärdigt och ibland även mer oacceptabelt när att avsluta Delstudie III Ett etiskt balanserat och rättfärdigat tillvägagångssätt att avsluta och inte sätta in behandlingar var om inte sätta in var acceptabelt så var avsluta också det tidig tillgång var i princip problematiskt men om tidig tillgång ska ges måste läkaren informera patienter om att behandlingen kommer att avslutas om den får ett negativt ersättningsbeslut Delstudie IV
