Militant Lactivism? Charlotte Faircloth,2013-03-01 Following networks of mothers in London and Paris the author profiles the narratives of women who breastfeed their children to full term typically a period of several years as part of an attachment parenting philosophy These mothers talk about their decision to continue breastfeeding as the natural thing to do evolutionarily appropriate scientifically best and what feels right in their hearts Through a theoretical focus on knowledge claims and accountability the author frames these accounts within a wider context of intensive parenting arguing that parenting practices infant feeding in particular have become a highly moralized affair for mothers practices which they feel are a critical aspect of their identity work The book investigates why how and with what implications some of these mothers describe themselves as militant lactivists and reflects on wider parenting culture in the UK and France Discussing gender feminism and activism this study contributes to kinship and family studies by exploring how relatedness is enacted in conjunction to constructions of the self

Featuring interviews with an international range of couple therapists and case studies from the author's own experiences the key aspects of the good enough concept are elaborated Rabin shows how these ideas can strengthen therapists sense of security and safety in using their lived experience and intuition Winnicott and Good Enough Couple Therapy is the ideal book for clinicians seeking an overarching framework for working with couples or families as well as those concerned with the importance of the client helper relationship
