

40 Years of Engaging with the Arts

— Ralph Homers — CEO of ING

We live in an era of responsibility. Much is expected of ING, and rightly so. Our contribution to a healthy economy and stable society is our responsibility; but likewise, it is a privilege to be able to participate in that same society.

For ING, endorsing art has always been a crucial part of this contribution. To reflect that, we are celebrating the 40th anniversary of the collection with this catalogue. I hope you enjoy it.

There doesn't seem to be enough painting by Michael Rosen in my office. The painting shows people at a table enjoying their first time together. Looking at it, you can almost hear the swoosh of people talking and feel the cool atmosphere. To me, this is like an embrace. Ralph Homers

The world has changed dramatically in the past 40 years, and art is an ideal medium through which to gain insight into changing contexts and times. John Lennon once said that his role as an artist was to try and express what we all feel – not to tell people how to feel. Neither to preach nor to lead, but instead to reflect us all. This catalogue can be viewed in the same way. Not only does it give an impression of ING's collection, but it also takes you on a journey through some of the most important themes that have shaped the world as we know it.

ING recently announced its new strategic direction: Think Forward – a direction that starts with our belief that all sustainable progress is driven by people with the imagination and determination to improve their future and the future of those around them. Art and change go hand in hand. For that reason, in our efforts to empower people to stay a step ahead in life and in business, ING will continue to engage with the arts in the years to come.

civil society Galliera employs sociological and political theories to reveal that while social capital is generally considered a mechanism of exclusion in the West in post socialist contexts it has been leveraged by artists and curators as a vital means of communication and action

Performing Social Change on the Island of Ireland Ciara L. Murphy, 2023-05-22 This book examines the relationship between moments of significant social change on the island of Ireland and performance practice during the twentieth and twenty first centuries It examines how moments of significant change influence not only the content of performance practice but also the form and function of theatre production and reception This book investigates how the Troubles and subsequent Peace Process Second Wave Feminism the Celtic Tiger and neoliberalism social revolution and the COVID 19 pandemic impacts the form and function of performance practice across the island of Ireland Although these forms of theatre and performance making refer to varied and distinct lineages of practice internationally there are key parallels that compel a study of their inter relationality in a specific Irish context This book explores how the performance of Ireland illuminates histories and stories that are on the margins illuminating the lived realities of everyday life through the presentation of moments of violence oppression and trauma as something that is as important as the larger narratives often ascribed to nationhood This book asks how performance practice engages with and informs moments of major social change on the island of Ireland through the distinct yet intersecting lenses of place performance form and social context over the course of almost a century of Irish theatre and performance practice
