The Making of NAFTA Maxwell A. Cameron, 2002 How exactly do countries negotiate major international agreements Until now reliably impartial accounts of how deals are made have been rare and usually describe only one side of a multiparty process Here Maxwell Cameron and Brian Tomlin provide the first full three country account of the negotiations surrounding the controversial North American Free Trade Agreement which went into effect on January 1 1994 Through extensive interviews with participants from all sides Cameron and Tomlin develop a detailed picture of the process by which the United States Mexico and Canada pursued closer economic relations and of the political realities that influenced the politicians and policymakers in each country Written in an engaging and accessible style The Making of NAFTA is a faithful account built on insider views of how the representatives of the three countries prepared for negotiated and implemented the agreement Cameron and Tomlin show how NAFTA was influenced by the personalities and the multiple sometimes conflicting objectives of the individuals involved They also explore what the negotiations can reveal more generally about the making of public policy and the importance of international negotiations Publisher's description

The Political Economy of American Trade Policy Anne O. Krueger, 2007-12-01 Exploring the political and economic determinants of trade protection this study provides a wealth of information on key American industries and documents the process of seeking and conferring protection Eight analytical histories of the automobile steel semiconductor lumber wheat and textile and apparel industries demonstrate that trade barriers rarely have unequivocal benefits and may be counterproductive. They show that criteria for awarding protection do not take into account the interests of consumers or other industries and that political influence and an organized lobby are major sources of protection. Based on these findings a final essay suggests that current policy fails to consider adequately economic efficiency the public good and indirect negative effects. This volume will interest scholars in economics business and public policy who deal with trade issues. The New Regionalism in the Americas Antoni Esteve, Jordi Jordana, Jun'ichi Gotō, Raúl Eduardo Sáez, 2000. Negotiating Trade John S. The Domestic Politics of International Trade considers the issues surrounding intellectual property rights in international trade negotiations in order to examine the challenges posed to domestic policy makers by the increasingly broad nature of Free Trade Agreements (FTAs). Throughout the book the author demonstrates the importance of domestic politics in understanding the nature and outcome of international negotiations particularly as they relate to international economic diplomacy. The book looks in detail at the intellectual property negotiations which formed part of the US Peru and US Colombia Free Trade Agreements and analyses the extent to which public health authorities and other parties affected by the increased levels of intellectual property protection were integrated into the negotiation process. The book then juxtaposes these findings with an analysis of the domestic origins of US negotiation objectives in the field of intellectual property paying particular attention to the role of the private sector in the development of these objectives. Based on a substantial amount of empirical research including approximately 100 interviews with negotiators capital based policy makers private sector representatives and civil society organisations in Lima Bogotá and Washington DC this book offers a rare account of different stakeholders' perceptions of the FTA negotiation process. Ultimately the book succeeds in integrating the study of domestic politics with that of international negotiations. This book will be of particular interest to academics as well as practitioners and students in the fields of international law economic law intellectual property political economy international relations comparative politics and government. Need for Renewal of Fast-track Trade Negotiating Authority United States.
