The Pricing-Out Phenomenon in the U.S. Housing Market Francesco Beraldi, Mr. Yunhui Zhao, 2023-01-06 The COVID 19 pandemic further extended the multi year housing boom in advanced economies and emerging markets alike against massive monetary easing during the pandemic In this paper we analyze the pricing out phenomenon in the U S residential housing market due to higher house prices associated with monetary easing We first set up a stylized general equilibrium model and show that although monetary easing decreases the mortgage payment burden it would raise house prices lower housing affordability for first time homebuyers and increase housing wealth inequality between first time and repeat homebuyers We then use the U S household level data to quantify the effect of the house price change on housing affordability relative to that of the interest rate change We find evidence of the pricing out effect for all homebuyers moreover we find that the pricing out effect is stronger for first time homebuyers than for repeat homebuyers The paper highlights the importance of accounting for general equilibrium effects and distributional implications of monetary policy while assessing housing affordability It also calls for complementing monetary easing with well targeted policy measures that can boost housing affordability particularly for first time and lower income households Such measures are also needed during aggressive monetary tightening given that the fall in house prices may be insufficient or too slow to fully offset the immediate adverse impact of higher rates on housing affordability

Housing Finance Review, 1983 Housing in the Seventies, 1976 The Banking Sector In Hong Kong H. Genberg, C. Hui, 2008-08-14 The book extensively discusses the structure and stability of the Hong Kong banking sector using economic theory and advanced empirical econometric techniques It is important for readers who are interested in studying the banking industry in general and the Hong Kong banking sector in particular

Homeownership United States. General Accounting Office, 1993 Kingdom of the Netherlands-The Netherlands International Monetary Fund. Monetary and Capital Markets Department, 2024-06-18 Macroprudential policy in the Netherlands has centered on the residential real estate RRE market given the importance of this market for households banks and insurers RRE represents nearly 50 percent of total household assets and housing loans account for about 85 percent of total household liabilities more than half of Dutch banks domestic loan portfolio and 15 percent of insurers assets Authorities have therefore actively used RRE related macroprudential tools such as banks capital risk weighting of residential mortgage loans limits on loan to value LTV and debt service to income DSTI ratios for mortgages or mortgage interest deductibility from taxes MID

Construction Review, 1990 Kingdom of Netherlands International Monetary Fund, 2011-06-21 Important issues of the Netherlands are discussed Openness to trade has benefited the Netherlands before the crisis and has supported the recent recovery process However both financial openness and trade linkages have also been a transmission channel for the financial crisis Synchronized fiscal tightening across Europe has important spillover effects for GDP growth The improvement on the supply side of credit has contributed to a normalization of the credit market However the recent increase in the financial stress index indicates that the situation is still fragile
