The business model cycle Sophia von Berg, 2020-12-17 Today firms all over the world have to deal with dynamic business environments. Fast moving digitalization has made information more transparent strengthening the role of the customer. At the same time the provider can have a much closer relationship with the user thanks to real time communication. However corporate practice does not have a process for developing dynamic business models and user centric business models that can be designed and changed using smart technologies have not yet been systematically integrated. To stay competitive companies need to rise to this challenge. The aim of this dissertation was to develop a dynamic user centric process model for business model design and change and to evaluate the model's ability to maintain a competitive advantage in the mobility sector. First the differences between static dynamic and user centric business models and their corresponding attributes were deduced. Then these findings were combined into a process model using system dynamics logic. This model considers the user a co creator of value and helps managers react to real time changes in their business model environment. Finally a mobility sector case study is presented to highlight the relevance of this model to real world application. This business model cycle BMC supports the strategic management of dynamic user centric business model design and change activities. It describes a step by step procedure of business model design that includes ideation prototyping and integration of business model options. Moreover it allows continuous monitoring of the business model environment and adaption of the model accordingly. At the same time bidirectional interaction between the user and provider is possible allowing the provider to adapt to their users needs. The BMC is unique in that these processes can take place simultaneously. Finally the real world case study in the mobility sector confirmed that using the BMC for strategic management maintains a lasting competitive business advantage.

Cost Accounting for Shared IT Infrastructures Reinhard Brandl, 2008-08-21 During the past few years, determining the value of IT has ranked high on the agenda of IT managers and Chief Information Officers (CIOs). The rather broad and abstract topic has been intensively discussed in the Information Systems literature for many years. It turns into a very tangible problem in the field of IT cost accounting. Nowadays, corporate information systems are distributed systems. A detailed measurement of resource demands of IT services on a distributed IT infrastructure and respective accounting and cost allocation turns out to be very expensive and impractical in most cases. The large proportion of indirect costs and the difficulty of finding adequate allocation rates are a significant problem in practice, regularly leading to free-rider problems. This problem has largely been ignored in the academic literature so far. Dr. Brandl proposes a method to derive estimators for the resource demand of service requests in a distributed IT infrastructure. This estimator is based on a set of load tests and respective measurements as they are often performed during the deployment phase of new information systems. Cost allocation keys can now be determined based on the number of service invocations per user or per department and the respective estimators. While these measurements provide a lean method for the determination of usage-based cost allocation keys, it is not obvious that the estimators have sufficient accuracy in particular concerning different types of services and volatile workloads.
