The Quest to Feel Good Paul R. Rasmussen, 2011-01-19 Emotions rather than simply being the result of random or disordered biochemical processes are adaptive mechanisms that are often overly relied upon as a function of basic learning processes The Quest to Feel Good helps the reader understand that negative emotions serve a critical adaptive purpose that functions in relation to one's ultimate desire for a felt positive state Paul Rasmussen addresses the role of emotions as adaptive components in combination with cognitive and behavioral processes to our overall orchestration of life To this end the therapist is directed to use a client's negative affect as a means of guiding critical therapeutic conclusions and decisions Rasmussen emphasizes an integration of the basic premises of Adlerian psychology with the evolutionary imperative model presented by Theodore Millon 1990 1999 This integration is used to explain the primacy of emotions in the manifestation of most clinical conditions This critical integration and focus makes the volume important necessary and unique to mental health professionals Case examples and illustrations are also offered throughout the text how to overcome these difficulties Clear concise and immediately relevant this is essential reading Wanting and Intending Neil Roughley,2016-03-01 This book aims to answer two simple questions what is it to want and what is it to intend Because of the breadth of contexts in which the relevant phenomena are implicated and the wealth of views that have attempted to account for them providing the answers is not quite so simple Doing so requires an examination not only of the relevant philosophical theories and our everyday practices but also of the rich empirical material that has been provided by work in social and developmental psychology The investigation is carried out in two parts dedicated to wanting and intending respectively Wanting is analysed as optative attitudinising a basic form of subjective standard setting at the core of compound states such as longings desires projects and whims The analysis is developed in the context of a discussion of Moore paradoxicality and deepened through the examination of rival theories which include functionalist and hedonistic conceptions as well as the guise of the good view and the pure entailment approach two views popular in moral psychology In the second part of the study a disjunctive genetic theory of intending is developed according to which intentions are optative attitudes on which in one way or another the mark of deliberation has been conferred It is this which explains intention's subjection to the requirements of practical rationality Moreover unlike wanting intending turns out to be dependent on normative features of our life form in particular on practices of holding responsible The book will be of particular interest to philosophers and psychologists working on motivation goals desire intention deliberation decision and practical rationality
