Oncofertility Ethical Legal Social And Medical Perspectives Cancer Treatment And Research:

Oncofertility Teresa K. Woodruff, Laurie Zoloth, Lisa Campo-Engelstein, Sarah Rodriguez, 2010-09-02 Oncofertility has emerged as a way to address potential lost or impaired fertility in cancer patients and survivors with active biomedical research that is developing new ways to help these individuals preserve their ability to have biological children In order to move beyond oncofertility as a science and medical technology and begin to address the ethical legal and social ramifications of this emerging field we must give voice to scholars from the humanities and social sciences to engage in a multidisciplinary discussion This book brings together a pool of experts from a variety of fields including communication economics ethics history law religion and sociology to examine the complex issues raised by recent developments in oncofertility and to offer advice from national and international perspectives as we create new technology Given the inherent interdisciplinary nature of oncofertility this book is not only valuable but also necessary to cultivate a deep understanding of new issues with the eventual aim of offering proposals for addressing them Indeed this book will be useful for people not only within the humanities and social sciences disciplines but also for those who are confronted with cancer and the possibility of impaired fertility and the medical practitioners within oncology and reproductive medicine who are at the front lines of this emerging field

Family-making Françoise Baylis, Carolyn McLeod, 2014 This volume explores the ethics of making or expanding families through adoption or technologically assisted reproduction For many people these methods are separate and distinct they can choose either adoption or assisted reproduction But for others these options blend together For example in some jurisdictions the path of assisted reproduction for same sex couples is complicated by the need for the partner who is not genetically related to the resulting child to adopt this child if she wants to become the child's legal parent The essays in this volume critically examine moral choices to pursue adoption assisted reproduction or both and highlight the social norms that can distort decision making Among these norms are those that favour people having biologically related children bionormativity or that privilege a traditional understanding of family as a heterosexual unit with one or more children where both parents are the genetic biological legal and social parents of these children As a whole the book looks at how adoption and assisted reproduction are morally distinct from one another but also emphasizes how the two are morally similar Choosing one the other or both of these approaches to family making can be complex in some respects but ought to be simple in others provided that one's main goal is to become a parent Building the Illinois Innovation Economy National Research Council, Policy and Global Affairs, Board on Science, Technology, and Economic Policy, Committee on Competing in
