Crisis communication on Social Media
Alexandra Popp, 2024-08-26 Master's Thesis from the year 2023 in the subject Communications Media Economics Media Management grade 1.3 University of Applied Sciences Neu-Ulm Fakultät Informationsmanagement language English abstract
The COVID-19 pandemic's resulting economic consequences for airports, employees, service providers and airlines have been well researched in the meantime. What remains open, however, are clear communication strategies for dealing with future health crises and pandemics and to develop possible preventive measures. It is of particular interest what type of content and what messages should be used by airlines to maximize interactions and the popularity and engagement of their publications. Since airlines have successfully managed to encourage passengers to fly with them again once travel restrictions were lifted, the following research question has emerged: How can international airlines use social media for effective crisis communication during global health crises such as the COVID-19 pandemic? The aim of the thesis is to analyze international airlines' crisis communication on social media in the spring of 2020, specifically on the platform Instagram, with their target groups in terms of crisis response strategies, publication frequency, content and message types. The study provides further insights to the existing research on social media crisis communication, bringing forth potential risks but also opportunities and measures that will enable the airline sector to emerge stronger from critical situations in similar circumstances. The research results enable communication managers to better understand airlines' crisis response strategies during public health crises. By providing practical implications that resulted from the content analysis, it will be useful in future decision making in the area of strategic crisis communication on social media and in upholding the company's reputation. In order to understand and evaluate the crisis communication of airlines during the COVID-19 pandemic, the first subchapter introduces the most important definitions, terms, theories and strategies of crisis communication research. The following two subchapters deal with social media and the platform Instagram as well as an analysis of the relevance of social media in crisis communication highlighting the opportunities and challenges of using social platforms as an instrument for crisis communication Once the crisis communication and social media literature has been covered the study takes a closer look at crisis communications in the airline industry and what can be learned from past events

Encyclopedia of Public Relations Robert L. Heath,2005 The Encyclopedia of Public Relations explores the evolution of the PR field with examples from history describing events changing practices and the key figures who developed and expanded the profession The encyclopedia explores key challenges facing the profession of public relations and its practitioners such as earning the trust and respect of critics and the general public Opinions about PR are as diverse as the issues addressed by the people and organizations in the field One good example is ethics decision making creations of meaning etc and the popular notion that many PR practitioners use their skills to deliberately misinform the public In contrast public relations professionals also have an integral role in social responsibility such as notifying the public of climate or public health concerns These volumes go into great depth about such ethical policies and challenges In fact the Public Relations Society of America PRSA operates under a specific code of ethics full details of which are included in an appendix The encyclopedia has also been put together with the knowledge that PR does not exclusively reside in the United States Major international figures research and organizations play a key part in the project

American Book Publishing Record ,2007 Communication strategies for product recalls in the healthcare business Thomas Osche,2010-03-01 Master s Thesis from the year 2007 in the subject Communications Public Relations Advertising Marketing Social Media grade 1 3 Anglia Ruskin University Ashcroft International Business School language English abstract After a series of cardiac implantable device recalls hit the industry in the year 2005 the question of a favourable corporate communication strategy about inevitable product recalls was raised Knowing that it is impossible to produce 100% failure free products I was personally interested in seeing how such recalls occurred and how successful they were handled by the different companies from a communication perspective This thesis analyses such device recalls since the year 2000 and attempts to identify a favourable communication strategy for the companies involved in such recalls in the future Qualitative analysis was performed on various secondary data sources to find positive and negative aspects of different communication strategies for the affected companies Four companies could be analysed where three provided significant results which were used for final recommendations Those recommendations are provided to support active corporate communication The basis of the recommended communication strategy is as follows Provide disclosure about probabilities of malfunctions while supportive to the most powerful stakeholders which are the physicians and the regulatory authorities When one company faces a recall it is favourable to take accountability and give advice to physicians about how to respond to their patients because they are facing the problem of having all the information at hand without an adequate guideline which summarises a clinical decision on how to act and how to weight risks of keeping the existing device versus the risks of device change out procedures Keywords communication strategy crisis management corporate communication healthcare business
