the next stage of his existence with greater powers and quickened vitality. Lofty mountains, eggs, trees, snakes and pillars, they all embody scientifically demonstrated truths of natural philosophy. Mountains are allegories of primal cosmogony; trees of the simultaneous evolution of spirit and matter; snakes and pillars are symbolical memorials of various attributes of the parallel evolution of two opposing forces eternally reacting upon each other. The mundane tree of the Hindus is the Ashvattha, with branches extending downward and roots upward. Comparative study of ancient cosmogonies demonstrates that in those ages which are shut out from our sight by the impenetrable mist of tradition, religious thought developed in uniform sympathy in every portion of the globe. The Egyptian Pyramid is another symbol of Universal Life. Archaic double-sexed deities in dual cosmogonic myths representing the physico-chemical principle of primordial creation loudly proclaim their hidden meaning. Mithras is the son of Bordj; the Persian mundane mountain Shiva is personated by Meru; Himalaya, the mundane mountain of the Hindus. Christianity metamorphosed the ingenious myth of the Serpent into Satan, the Prince of Darkness. Part 2. On the Invisible World of Elements, Elementals and Elementaries. God, or the infinite and uncreated spirit, a divine substance of the highest virtue and excellency produced everything else by emanative causality. The world is underpinned by magnetic sympathy or attraction between men, animals, plants and even minerals. More. Each planet is inhabited by spiritual beings who exercise influences over other beings inhabiting more gross and material spheres than their own and especially over our earth. There is only one magnet in the universe and this is the Central Spiritual Sun. From It proceeds the magnetization of everything else. There are two kinds of magnetic attraction: sympathy and fascination; the one is holy and natural, the other unholy and unnatural. The magnetism of pure love is the originator of every created thing. In its ordinary sense, love between the sexes is electricity. Athanasius Kircher calls sensual love the fever of species; liphas, L. vi, an intoxication of the astral light. Man is a little world inside the great universe. Like a fetus he is suspended by three spirits in the matrix of the Macrocosmos. The Pythagorean Monas, which lives in solitude and darkness, may remain on this earth forever invisible and impalpable. When by successive transformations throughout the ages this once impalpable Atom finds itself reclothed in that primordial essence which is identical with that of its Creator, then the Sons of God will once more shout for joy at the return of the Pilgrim. Man possesses a double celestial power and his triple nature stands in relationship to all things. Being the mirror of the universe, man is allied to heaven. Music exercises a singular therapeutic power over certain diseases, especially those of the nervous class. Dire are the consequences of abusing magnetic powers. Only the pure in heart can heal the ills of the body. Magical powers are never possessed by those addicted to vicious indulgences. It is not always the minds which are the most scientifically trained that are the best in matters of simple common sense and honest truth. Have they not these Titans of thought dragged down God from His hiding place and given us instead a protoplasm? A presumptuous scepticism that rejects facts without examination of their truth is in some respects more injurious than unquestioning credulity. The perpetual lamps of alchemy stand for the incorruptible and immortal spirit. The Egyptians more than any other people hoped that their ever burning lamp would help the material soul to part with its earthly dwelling and unite forever with its divine counterpart A Cypriote knight had both flax and linen made out of asbestos which were cleaned by simply throwing them in the fire A similarly made gown such as the Buddhist monks wear thrown into a large pit full of glowing coals and taken out two hours afterward was as clear as if it had been washed with soap and water Magic in prehistoric periods had a part in the mysteries The greatest phenomena the so called miracles rested on the arcane knowledge of the ancient priests of physics and all the branches of chemistry or rather alchemy The twins brothers Castor and Pollux are personifications of the twin polarity of electricity and magnetism The Dioscuroi constantly die and return to life together for it is absolutely necessary that one should die that the other may live In their unbounded glorification of matter our physicists proclaim matter the sole and autocratic sovereign of a Boundless Universe If they could they would forcibly divorce matter from her consort and place the widowed queen on the great throne of nature made vacant by the exiled spirit The Platonic philosophy was one of order system and proportion It embraced the evolution of worlds and species the correlation and conservation of energy the transmutation of material form and the indestructibility of matter and of spirit Plato s method like that of geometry was to descend from universals to particulars In the same manner as lovers gradually advance from that beauty which is apparent to that which is divine so the ancient priests attributed the alliance and sympathy between natural things to the underlying interconnectedness of all things The Divine Proclus pointed out certain mysterious peculiarities of plants minerals and animals all of which are well known to our naturalists but none of which are explained Proclus who combined Theosophy and Theurgy also advocated a divine science that is firmly and solely based on the mysterious affinities between organic and inorganic bodies the visible productions of the four kingdoms and the invisible powers of the universe Persons have been known to fall sick simultaneously with the uprooting of a tree planted upon their natal day and dying when the tree died Alas The divine intellect is veiled in man his animal brain alone philosophises In spiritually fertile periods the occult powers of plants animals and minerals magically sympathize with the superior natures and the divine soul of man is in perfect rapport with these inferior ones Formerly magic was a universal science entirely in the hands of the sacerdotal savant Though the focus was jealously guarded in the sanctuaries its rays illuminated the whole of mankind There is nothing new under the Sun Yet modern scientists have reaped more palms and laurels for their great discoveries than Lucretius Cicero Plutarch and Seneca had hairs on their heads Plutarch said that an idea has no subsistence by itself but gives figure and form to shapeless matter and becomes the cause of its manifestation Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications ,1994
