Understanding the social integration of adolescents of foreign origin: Longitudinal investigations of inter-origin friendship formation Olov Aronson, 2021-09-24 The present dissertation aims to understand some of the opportunities for and influences on the social integration of adolescents of foreign origin in Sweden Informed by previous research the dissertation suggests that successful social integration involves friendship formation between peers of similar origins intra origin friendship formation as well as friendship formation between peers of different origins inter origin friendship formation Social integration can be difficult to achieve in practice because most individuals tend to be homophilic and form intra origin friendships rather than inter origin friendships Four studies based on longitudinal data are presented in the dissertation The first study seeks to widen the understanding of refugee girls friendship formation through a qualitative analysis of interviews with refugee girls The second study estimates stochastic actor oriented models to investigate the friendship formation of adolescents with supportive and or controlling parent child relationships The third article presents cross lagged panel models for the reciprocal longitudinal associations between friendship formation and two forms of leisure visits to youth centers and participation in structured leisure activities Finally the fourth study uses stochastic actor oriented models to analyze with whom adolescents form friendships when they are involved in different forms of digital leisure including online communication video watching and digital gaming The refugee girls in the qualitative study stated that they formed close friendships with family members such as cousins and siblings rather than with peers of native origin because they experienced the latter as too dissimilar from themselves The adolescents in the first quantitative study formed relatively more inter origin friendships when their parents were supportive and fewer inter origin friendships when their parents were controlling According to the third study visits to youth centers were associated with a larger number of intra origin friendships among adolescents of foreign origin while participation in structured leisure activities such as sports and cultural projects was related to more friendship formation regardless of origin The fourth study suggested that native adolescents who were involved in digital gaming formed fewer friendships with native peers and had fewer friends outside of the school class and foreign adolescents who communicated more online formed fewer friendships with native classmates but more friendships outside of the school class All four studies indicate that the social integration of adolescents of foreign origin is not an automatic process that invariably happens when adolescents of different origins are mixed in the same location When adolescents organize their own social lives away from the involvement of adults they seem to remain or become more homophilic and form more friendships with peers of their own origin By contrast native and foreign adolescents tend to form more inter origin friendships when adults provide them with support and structured social activities In other words the social integration of foreign adolescents seems to require supportive and committed adults who contribute to facilitating inter origin friendship formation very often think and behave differently than do men industrialized societies cater to masculine perspectives The Psychology of Women emerged as a field of study focusing on just those areas in which women most often butted against assumed roles And similarly in the 1990s the Psychology of Men emerged to focus on the same issues for men The Encyclopedia of Gender covers all three areas under one cover discussing psychological differences in personality cognition and behavior as well as biologically based differences and how those differences impact behavior Coverage includes studies of these differences in applied settings such as education business the home in politics sports competition etc Key Features Over 100 In depth chapters by leading scholars in the psychology of women and gender Addresses critical questions of similarities and differences in gendering across diverse groups challenging myths about gender polarization and the Venus Mars distinction Broad coverage of topics from theory and method to development personality violence sexuality close relationships work health and social policy Sensitive attention to multicultural and cross cultural research Clearly written readable comprehensive with helpful guides outline glossary reference list Raises difficult questions related to power inequality ethics and social justice Challenges the reader to revise established truths and to seek further information Maintains a feminist and woman centered focus

The Origin of the Idea of Chance in Children Jean Piaget,Barbel

Inhelder,2014-08-01 Although originally published in France in 1951 this English translation was not published until 1975

The book supplements the authors previous publications on the development of thought in the child and is the result of two preoccupations how thought that is in the process of formation acts to assimilate those aspects of experience that cannot be assimilated deductively for example the randomly mixed and the necessity of discovering how the mental processes work in the totality of spontaneous and experimental searchings that make up what is called the problem of induction Induction is a sifting of our experiences to determine what depends on regularity what on law and what on chance The authors examine the formation of the physical aspects of the notion of chance they study groups of random subjects and of special subjects and they analyse the development of combining operations which contributes to determining the relationship between chance probability and the operating mechanisms of the mind
