Post-process Theory Thomas Kent, 1999 Breaking with the still dominant process tradition in composition studies post process theory or at least the different incarnations of post process theory discussed by the contributors represented in this collection of original essays endorses the fundamental idea that no codifiable or generalizable writing process exists or could exist Post process theorists hold that the practice of writing cannot be captured by a generalized process or a big theory Most post process theorists hold three assumptions about the act of writing writing is public writing is interpretive and writing is situated The first assumption is the commonsensical claim that writing constitutes a public interchange By interpretive act post process theorists generally mean something as broad as making sense of and not exclusively the ability to move from one code to another To interpret means more than merely to paraphrase it means to enter into a relationship of understanding with other language users And finally because writing is a public act that requires interpretive interaction with others writers always write from some position or some place Writers are never nowhere they are situated Leading theorists and widely published scholars in the field contributors are Nancy Blyler John Clifford Barbara Couture Nancy C DeJoy Sidney I Dobrin Elizabeth Ervin Helen Ewald David Foster Debra Journet Thomas Kent Gary A Olson Joseph Petraglia George Pullman David Russell and John Schilb
