Agency and Identity in the Ancient Near East Sharon R. Steadman, Jennifer C. Ross, 2016-04-01 Agency theory examines the relationship between individuals or groups when one party is doing work on behalf of another Agency and Identity in the Ancient Near East offers a theoretical study of agency and identity in Near Eastern archaeology an area which until now has been largely ignored by archaeologists The book explores how agency theory can be employed in reconstructing the meaning of spaces and material culture how agency and identity intersect and how the availability of a textual corpus may impact on the agency approach Ranging from the Neolithic to the Islamic period Agency and Identity in the Ancient Near East covers sites located in Turkey Iraq Syria Jordan Palestine and Israel The volume includes contributions from philology art history computer simulation studies materials science and the archaeology of settlement and architecture From Mine to Microscope Ian Freestone, Thilo Rehren, 2009-04-09 These twenty papers dedicated to Mike Tite focus upon the interpretation of ancient artefacts and technologies particularly through the application of materials analysis Instruments from the human eye to mass spectrometry provide insights into a range of technologies ranging from classical alum extraction to Bronze Age wall painting and cover materials as diverse as niello flint bronze glass and ceramic Ranging chronologically from the Neolithic through to the medieval period and geographically from Britain to China these case studies provide a rare overview which will be of value to students teachers and researchers with an interest in early material culture Invisible Hands Margaret S. Graves, 2026-02-10 The remarkable history of forged and fabricated Islamic ceramics their makers and their unique role in colonial trade In the heyday of Islamic art collecting around the turn of the twentieth century thousands of premodern ceramic objects circulated on the international antiquities market Invisible Hands tells the story of how traditional craft skills of the Islamic world often thought to have died out with the advent of industrialization were redirected toward a thriving new market in the colonial era the fabrication and fictionalizing of antiquities especially ceramics In this stunning work of art history Margaret Graves shakes the foundations of the discipline challenging us to reconsider what is and is not art She traces how sophisticated fabrications as modern as they were believed to be medieval moved within an international network of diggers dealers and collectors who took advantage of a largely unregulated marketplace to exchange and amass objects that were fabulous in every sense of the word She looks at canonical artworks as well as many previously unpublished and rarely seen objects shedding light on the astonishingly varied ways Islamic ceramics were altered and remade by highly skilled craftspeople to meet the demands of Western collectors Shifting away from the moralizing stance of past studies on reconstructed Islamic ceramics Graves shows how fabrication and forgery became a major site of participation in modern global capitalism and establishes an entirely new paradigm in the history of art Drawing on a substantive new body of provenance research archaeology economic history and laboratory analysis Invisible Hands centers previously marginalized objects reframing the practices of fabrication and forgery as crucial forms of invention and artistic skill worthy of study and admiration
