Meditations On Zen And Martial Arts Philosophy:

Meditations on Zen and Martial Arts Philosophy Jason Kunen, 2012-05 Martial arts meditation and Zen are hot topics in today's age. The compilation of essays here attempt to connect these practices and ideas together to elucidate their concepts for those not involved in such practices and to augment the understanding of those who are. Although martial arts as their very nature should be geared towards giving people a skill that will help protect themselves and their loved ones, the objective of such practices must adapt to these changing times and cater to the internal and spiritual element of the human being. Incorporating Zen philosophy and meditative practices, we experience a profound shift from our ordinary self-centered ego mindset to a holistic meditative consciousness that not only transforms our own life but enriches the lives of others.

Pragmatist Philosophy and Dance Eric Mullis, 2019-11-29 This book investigates how Pragmatist philosophy as a philosophical method contributes to the understanding and practice of interdisciplinary dance research. It uses the author's own practice-based research project Later Rain to illustrate this. Later Rain is a post-dramatic dance theater work that engages primarily with issues in the philosophy of religion and socio-political philosophy. It focuses on ecstatic states that arise in Appalachian charismatic Pentecostal church services, states characterized by dancing paroxysms, shouting, and speaking in tongues (glossolalia). Research for this work is interdisciplinary as it draws on studio practice, ethnographic field work, cultural history, Pentecostal history, and theology, folk aesthetics, anthropological understandings of ecstatic religious rituals, and dance history regarding acclaimed works that have sought to present aspects of religious ecstasy on stage: Doris Humphrey's The Shakers (1931), Mark Godden's Angels in the Architecture (2012), Martha Clarke's Angel Reapers (2015), and Ralph Lemon's Geography trilogy (2005). The project thereby demonstrates a process model of dance philosophy showing how philosophy and dance artistry intertwine in a specific creative process.

Philosophy and the Martial Arts Graham Priest, Damon Young, 2014-09-19 This is the first substantial academic book to lay out the philosophical terrain within the study of the martial arts and to explore the significance of this fascinating subject for contemporary philosophy. The book is divided into three sections. The first section concerns what philosophical reflection can teach us about the martial arts and especially the nature and value of its practice. The second section deals with the other direction of the dialectical interplay between philosophy and the martial arts: how the martial arts can inform philosophical issues important in their own right. Finally, because many of the notable martial arts are of Asian origin, there are particularly close links between the arts and Asian philosophies and Buddhism in particular, and therefore the last section is devoted to this topic. The essays in this collection deal with a wide range of philosophical issues: normative ethics, meta-ethics, aesthetics, phenomenology, the philosophy of mind, Ancient Greek and Buddhist thought. By demonstrating the very real nature of the engagement between the martial arts and philosophy, this book is essential reading for any serious student or scholar with an interest in the martial arts, Eastern philosophy, the philosophy of sport, or the study of physical culture.

Raposa, 2003-12-11 The relationship between meditation and the martial arts is a multifaceted one meditation is one of the practices in which martial artists engage in order to prepare for combat while the physical exercises constituting much of the discipline of the martial arts might well be considered meditative practices Michael Raposa himself a martial arts practitioner suggests there is a sense in which meditation may in turn be considered a form of combat citing a variety of spiritual disciplines that are not strictly classified as martial arts yet that employ the heavy use of martial images and categories as part of their self description Raposa in this extraordinary alloy of meditation manual historical synthesis and spiritual guide provides a fascinating approach to understanding the connection between martial arts and spirituality in such diverse disciplines as Japanese aikido Chinese tai chi chuan Hindu yoga Christian asceticism Zen Buddhism and Islamic jihad What happens when spiritual discipline is appropriated for exercises meant for health or recreation How might prayer meditation and ritual be understood as martial activities What is the nature of conflict and who is the enemy These are some of the questions Raposa raises and responds to in Meditation and the Martial Arts his rumination on the martial arts as meditative practice and meditation as a martial discipline
