Myers,2009-11 Over the past two to three hundred years humanity s ecological footprint has ballooned to such an extent that we are now fundamentally altering the planet We have transformed the Earth s land surface and altered the function of its ecosystems and we are triggering the rapid loss of both terrestrial and marine life We are also profoundly changing our planet s climate It is increasingly apparent that the breadth and depth of the changes we are wreaking on the environment are imperiling not only many of the other species with which we share the ecological stage but the health and wellbeing of our own species as well Global climate change threatens human health in numerous and profound ways Large segments of the population will experience more heat waves altered exposure to infectious disease and more frequent natural disasters Most significantly climatic disruption threatens the adequacy of the core building blocks of health for large populations around the globe sufficient food and nutrition safe water for drinking and sanitation fresh air to breathe and secure homes to live in As climate change dismantles these central elements of healthy societies people with fewer resources will be forced to migrate in large numbers to lands where they may not be welcome A likely result of all of these processes will be increased civic instability and strife
