

High beam warning light
— High beam warning light
— Low beam warning light

It gives when the primary head-lamp beams are in use; its purpose is to remind the driver to switch off or dip the headlights on entering a brightly lit area, or when approaching other traffic.

Instrument panel light switch (9) (9)

The dimmer switch, which is the uppermost on the left-hand side of the panel, is only operative when the side lights are on; maximum brightness is obtained by moving the switch back slightly upwards. The panel lights can then be progressively dimmed by continuing the outward movement of the knob.

Panel light switch

Windscreen wiper switch (10) (10)

The switch controlling the wipers is the lowest of the left-hand switch panel. Move switch outwards to switch wipers on. When the switch is returned to the 'off' position, the wiper blades are automatically parked at the end of their stroke.

Windscreen wiper switch

Windscreen wiper speed control, late Mk II models (11) (11)

The dimmer switch, which is the centre one on the left-hand side of the panel, controls the wiper speed. To increase the wiper speed, move switch outwards.

Speedometer (12) (12)

The speedometer incorporates road and trip mileage indicators. The trip reading can be turned back to zero by rotating the button protruding beneath the face panel. On 4-speed Saloon models the maximum recommended speeds in each gear are indicated by appropriate yellow figures.

Speedometer
4-speed model (Saloon)

On cars fitted with Borg-Warner Automatic transmission, a speed of 105 m.p.h. (168 k.p.h.) must not be exceeded, otherwise serious damage to the engine may result.

The red marking on the speedometer face is for the purpose of drawing attention to this point.

The reason for this limitation is that the axle ratio has been chosen to give the best overall performance suited to the majority of requirements.

Tachometer (13) (13), Coupé models

Tachometer, Coupé models

The tachometer is housed in the instrument panel adjacent to the speedometer. It gives the direct visual indication of the engine speed.

The amber warning sector from 1,000 to 1,200 r.p.m. is followed by a red danger sector covering the range from 1,200 to 1,500 r.p.m.

In the interests of reliability and engine life, speeds should not normally be allowed to exceed 1,000 r.p.m., but 1,200 r.p.m. may be used occasionally.

Under no circumstances should the needle be allowed to travel into the red danger sector, otherwise serious damage to the engine may result.
